FOUR-ACE POKER TOLD IN COURT

The story of how a game of "pitch" was turned into poker in the Langham Hotel and, in spite of the fact that one of the ambitious players held four aces he was beaten with the good old straight flush, was told with some detail to-day before Judge Bennett in the Municipal Court.

The complainant was John Lyall of the "Follies of 1910" company, now playing in the city. Incidentally Mr. Lyall qualified for a place in the "Follies of 1911" company. He told how he was roped into the game Wednesday night and charged that he was double-crossed by a supposed friend in the trio of strangers with whom he played.

The defendants were John Finnerty and Jean Purcell. The latter was also known as Baker. The two were charged with winning more than $5. They were found guilty and held in $100 each for sentence to-morrow.

Says He Was Flimflammed.

Lyall alleged that he was flimflammed out of $32 as a result of the game. He was the first witness and told the following story:

"Wednesday night while I was sitting in the lobby of the hotel, Baker spoke to me and then introduced me to his pal friends, Finnerty and Dougherty. They suggested going to Finnerty's room and playing a game of whist. When we arrived at the room somebody suggested playing pitch.

"I said I knew nothing of the game but was willing to play. Baker agreed to be my partner.

"When the first hand was dealt out Finnerty said he had a good poker hand. I said I once have a good poker hand and it was agreed that we play a hand of poker, with the result that Baker, my partner, won four or five dollars.

"The next hand was dealt out by Doc, as they called Dougherty. We then talked of playing euchre but finally decided to play pitch.

Advice from Mr. Baker.

"As I didn't know anything about pitch, Baker, who threw down his hand, consented to advise me.

"He looked at my hand and said that I had another good poker hand. Finnerty and I were left in the game, and we agreed to play poker. I put in a dollar, and everybody raised me three or four dollars. Doc was down on paper for $35. Baker told me to get out and bet as he was my partner and to me he said he would give me an I. O. U. if I would put up the money.

"The pot was raised to $35 and I called Doc, who dropped out of the game, and three kings, I had four aces and Finnerty had a straight flush of clubs. Finnerty took the pot.

"After losing my money I went down stairs and inquired about the fellows and learned that Finnerty had often played poker at the Richwood Hotel. I went back to the room and found the three of them playing cards, but there was no money on the table.

Diamond Ring in the Pot.

"Soon they began playing poker again and Finnerty said he lost all his money. He put up a diamond ring worth $250. Baker said this far down he was all in. Finnerty was cleaned out and Doc had all the money.

Judge Bennett asked the complainant how much he lost, to which he replied that his roll of $32 was left in the room.

"What is your complaint against Baker?" asked the Court.

"I charge Baker with showing cards to get into the game," replied the witness. "Baker agreed to split half of the proceeds and split half the time. I lost."

Baker then cross-examined the complainant.

"Don't you remember holding four aces twice and getting beaten by a flush, Lyall?"

"I don't remember. That may have been so."

Special Officer Irwin then questioned Lyall in behalf of the Commonwealth but the witness did not add any material facts to his story.

Who Said Poker?

Sergeant McGlusky took the stand and told of arresting Finnerty and Purcell, alias Baker.

He told the court that he found the young men in the hotel last night.

"While at the box," said the sergeant, "somebody approached and accused Finnerty of stealing one of his friends. Finnerty said to the man: 'If I knew he was a friend of yours I wouldn't have taken his money.'

The defense opened with Baker's testimony. His story conflicted but little with that told by Lyall, with the exception that he accused Lyall of suggesting a game of poker several times, after hands were dealt out for the first time, acknowledged that he and his partner, Lyall, won several pots, but denied being a shiner by trade.

"After Lyall lost all his money he jumped up like a wild man, tore his hands through his hair and said that he was ruined, would have to go to jail, and a lot of foolish stuff like that. Then he went out.

"In about ten minutes he returned and we all took a walk after finishing the game, Dougherty cleaning up all out."

Cross examined by Special Officer Irwin, the witness said that he lived at No. 19 West Brookline street, and that he works with Finnerty selling coats and rubber goods.

Finnerty's only statement was that he was a working man and had but a bunch of papers declaring that they were the bills showing the amount of business done.

Maurice Gottlieb, employed as a salesman by Finnerty, testified for the two defendants. He said he was in the room and watched the entire proceedings. His story corroborated that told by the defendants.

Judge Bennett after finding them guilty told Baker that he was equally guilty of the charge of winning more than $5 at a gambling game on his own statements.

PLYMOUTH IN CRASH WITH TUG

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—More than one hundred men and women passengers were badly frightened to-day when several big car floats crashed into the Fall River steamboat Plymouth in the East River off Fiftieth street, tearing a hole in the bow of the Sound liner.

The Plymouth was bound in and had just passed through Hellgate when the accident occurred. The passengers on the Plymouth were at breakfast, although a few of them had not yet dressed, and when the crash came, with the noise of grinding timbers, the alarm was great. In a moment the decks were crowded with frightened men and women, while members of the steamboat's crew ran among them shouting that there was no danger.

Hole Torn in Side.

A general rush was made for the port side of the vessel, where the car floats were, and when it was seen that the hole was above the water line everybody returned to the dining saloon or their staterooms.

The Plymouth is commanded by Captain George E. Rowland. He was piloting the vessel down the middle of the East River against the tide. Ahead of him was a New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad tug, with a big car float lashed to either side.

Tug Shifted Course.

The car floats and tug were coming up the river and the proper signals had been exchanged when Captain Rowland of the Plymouth saw the tug suddenly veer in its course. The car floats turned directly in the path of the big sound liner, and although Captain Rowland shoved his helm hard over, he was too late to avoid the floats, crashing into the port bow of the Plymouth and putting a hole in her side.

When the crash came Frank Thomas, a workman on one of the floats, was struck by a freight car that was dislodged by the collision. The car jumped the rails and crushed the man to death between it and another car.

BOSTON FISHERMEN ARE CALLED CARELESS

Boston fishermen were scolded for their lack of respect for the property along the shores of Lynn and Swampscott" before the Legislative Committee on Fisheries and Game at the State House to-day by Harbor Master Saunders of Lynn. Representative Quinn of Swampscott and several citizens of that town. They favored a bill to prohibit the use of nets in the harbor or bay. "Besides taking property unlawfully, the fishermen are apt to throw unmarketable fish on the shore where it becomes a nuisance or must be taken care of at the expense of the city or town," said Mr. Saunders. A law requiring all fishermen in these waters to take out licenses in Lynn and Swampscott, was suggested as a "remedy for the evil."

BILL FOR MUNICIPAL ICE PLANTS FAVORED

A bill providing for an amendment to the Constitution to allow cities and towns to manufacture ice for sale was heard to-day, was given a hearing before the legislative Committee on Constitutional Amendments at the State House to-day. The bill provides that cities and towns may establish municipal ice plants. Representative Charles H. Morrill of Haverhill and Alderman Thomas J. Lahey of Salem, spoke for the amendment. Alderman Lahey declared that the bill would do away with the ice monopolies and would enable the people to buy ice at a reasonable price. He told the committee that the Salem City Council has already voted in favor of a municipal ice plant.

PLYMOUTH VILLAGES BURIED BY ERUPTION

MANILA, Feb. 2.—The eruption of Mount Taal was renewed with terrific fury to-day, and waves of lava and mud were scattered over the surrounding country for a distance of twenty miles.

It is estimated that 2,500 lives have been lost.

Many of the natives, who were fleeing from the devastated sections, were overwhelmed and suffocated or burned to death.

Several villages are reported to have been overwhelmed by the eruption.

The eruption was accompanied by violent earthquake shocks which were felt as far as Manila, although no damage was done in this city.

The earthquake shocks recorded here today were of less intensity than those felt with the first eruption, and at the observatory belief was expressed that the eruption would abate from this time.

American soldiers are now in control in the country around Mount Taal, and the burial of the dead is well underway. Hundreds, however, will never be found, being many feet below the surface of the mud waves which overwhelmed several villages.

"BIG BILL" SETTLES HIS TAILOR'S BILL

"Big Bill" Kelliher, who was to appear in the Poor Debtors' Court to-day to show cause why a certificate authorizing his arrest on a civil process should not be made, failed to show up. Neither did the complainant in the case. A settlement was made outside, it is said, and the matter was stricken from the books. According to the facts in the case Kelliher contracted with Morris Green of No. 31 Charles street, West End, in May, 1910, to make a blue dress for his wife, the bill amounting to $75. He did not pay, and Green brought suit in the Superior Court and was awarded $87.80. Kelliher still refused to pay, and so was accordingly summoned into the Poor Debtors' Court.

Mrs. Barker of Revere, Who Is Suing for Divorce

Mrs. Wilmah A. Barker, who asks for $10,000 attachment on husband's property in her suit for divorce.

MRS. BARKER SEEKS DIVORCE

"My wife has been ill advised. I simply know Miss Songster and not very well at that," to-day said Wilmah A. Barker, who is defendant in a divorce suit in which Mrs. Barker names Mary Songster as corespondent. Barker, who is known as the double of President Taft, is a claim agent for the Boston & Maine Railroad. He lives in a home he erected for his wife last Summer at No. 50 Wilson square, Revere.

It was supposed by neighbors until recently that the attitude of Mr. and Mrs. Barker was harmonious, but last week Mrs. Barker left the house and went to live with a sister, Mrs. George Connors, of Cross street, Medford.

The departure of Mrs. Barker was several days after Barker went away on a trip. When he returned the house was practically empty.

"Yes, I know Miss Songster," said Mr. Barker, "but I cannot for the life of me see how our names could be linked together in this way. I believe that she is now in Philadelphia, or at least I have been told so by a friend.

"It is all right for my wife and others to bring charges but quite another thing for them to bring any proofs. Mrs. Barker has been ill advised. I have not as yet been served with divorce papers."

Mrs. Barker, when seen at the home of her sister in Medford, said: "I have nothing whatever to say about the matter in any way, shape or manner."

In her libel for divorce Mrs. Barker asks alimony and requests that an attachment of $10,000 on the property of her husband be allowed. Sawyer, Healy & Stone appear as counsel for Mr. Barker.

STORM GRIPS NEW ENGLAND

Boston is now in the midst of its first big, real snow storm of the Winter. Up to noon to-day four and one-half inches of snow had fallen since yesterday morning. And the Weather Man said to-night that there will be more snow to-morrow.

Snow is reported all over northern New England and New York and cold weather has gone with it. In the Berkshires it is very cold, but no snow has fallen.

The official forecast is: Fair to-night; Saturday, unsettled probably with snow; rising temperature; moderate to brisk easterly winds.

At 7 o'clock to-day the snow, which took one encore last night, came back for another bow.

A piercing wind that at times approached the velocity of a gale, drove the snow before it and caused anxiety to shipping men. No wrecks have been reported, but shipping was held up in harbors and the few vessels that made this port had to fight their way in. At one time it looked as if the storm, which is supposed to have "broken the back of winter," would develop into a blizzard, and when the snow necessitated raising at moderate after the storm had been supposed to subside, word went out that telephone and telegraph wires were predicting a snow storm for Boston.

The snow ceased falling on its encore appearance some after 9 o'clock, and by 10 o'clock the temperature was 10 above, a fog whenever to say about the matter in any way, shape or manner."

In her libel for divorce Mrs. Barker asks alimony and requests that an attachment of $10,000 on the property of her husband be allowed. Sawyer, Healy & Stone appear as counsel for Mr. Barker.

POLICE HEAD COMPLAINS OF BOSTONIANS

The annual report of Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, made public to-day, is one of the most remarkable documents of the kind ever issued in America.

It is amazing from two points of view.

First, Mr. O'Meara frankly admits that the police are absolutely unable to cope with vice as it is modernized in Boston.

Second, Mr. O'Meara declares in effect that the people of the city are so sodden that he has received no help from any quarter in his efforts to improve conditions.

Mr. O'Meara declares that the spirit of lynch law pervades all classes of citizens when their profits or comforts are interfered with. He says:

"No man without police experience can know the frequency with which citizens demand of policemen action which the laws do not permit them to take. The spirit of "lynch law" seems to be in all classes of citizens and to manifest itself in individuals whenever their own profits or comforts are jeopardized."

Another reason why the report is of such remarkable interest is because the long experience of Mr. O'Meara as an editor and writer has fitted him for presenting to the public in clear, concise and graphic language the situation in Boston as it exists.

MR. O'MEARA USES PLAIN LANGUAGE.

The report is not the usual complimented document in which the writer confuses and sometimes tries to confuse—he considers it a duty of legal privilege. Mr. O'Meara knows what he wants to say and he says it so that he can be understood by anybody.

It should be remembered that the report is not an attack upon the police system of Boston by some irresponsible person who is in no conversant with the facts. It is Commissioner O'Meara's own report; the report of the man who knows more about the police system and the "business of vice," as he calls it, than any other man in Boston, and who has taken the pains to write about them as no other man could do it.

In this connection it is recalled that the report was recently printed that the two wickedest cities in the world are London and Boston.

Tells of Telephone Tricks.

Mr. O'Meara declares that the telephone has been utilized in the business of immorality so cleverly that it is next to impossible for the police to enforce the law.

What are practically telephone exchanges in the carrying on of vice exist in many sections of Boston, Mr. O'Meara asserts.

"But especially and most discouraging of all," says Commissioner O'Meara, "I venture to say is that attitude of the courts which makes it easy for keepers of houses of ill fame to avoid conviction, and when convicted offer all to escape, in many cases, with petty fines."

Because of the great importance of the matter discussed and of the facts presented, the AMERICAN to-day prints verbatim at considerable length from Commissioner O'Meara's report, as follows:

By STEPHEN O'MEARA.

Police Commissioner for the City of Boston.

"The particularly vigorous work of the police in the years 1908 and 1909 for the suppression of public and semi-public sexual immorality was continued in 1910; but the previous work seems in itself to have reduced in some directions the number of opportunities for successful action.

"The number of persons prosecuted in 1908 and 1909 for keeping houses of ill fame was very much the largest in the history of the department, and to that large number is to be attributed the reduction in the number prosecuted in 1910. The evidence on which the latter class of prosecutions was obtained through police effort was very limited, including 300 searches with warrants in 125 different places, in 1909. The number of places searched was 115 and the number of searches was 600. The difference between the 300 and the results in the two years indicates greater caution on the part of the offenders and the extension of police search to places less marked with suspicion. The searches of houses of ill fame resulted further in the arrest on the premises of eighty-four men and forty-four other than the keepers of the places, who were

8 ARRESTS IN DYNAMITE CASE

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—On a specific charge of being responsible for the death of Michael Mufel, one of the victims of the dynamite explosion of last Wednesday night such will probably be arraigned before Judge Queen in the First Criminal Court, Jersey City, to-day. Warrants for two others have been issued in extradition proceedings.

The men are Captain Herr St. John Frederick Peters and T. Robert G. Morse, all officials of the Dupont-De Nemours Powder Company; Alexander Hamilton, general freight agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey; John Morris, its freight agent at Communipaw; Louis P. Goldstein, dockmaster; Charles Bidder, wrecker, and James Hraling, owner of the boat, Catherine W. They have announced they will surrender without extradition.

Healing was the first to surrender. He gave himself up at the City Hall police station.

To Fix Blame.

The issuance of the warrants shows the intention of the Jersey City authorities to place the responsibility for the explosion which caused the deaths of fifty persons, injured hundreds of others and caused a property loss of more than $100,000,000. The warrants were issued by Justice of the Peace Frank E. Kinsele, Jr., at the request of Detective Sergeant James Hickey of Jersey City.

"I will not hold the dead men responsible," said Public Prosecutor Pierre P. Garvin to the AMERICAN after a day spent in investigating the explosion. The prosecutor is being assisted in his investigation by other Hudson County officials, by the Jersey City force of detectives and government officials. "We shall endeavor to fix the crime on some one person or group of persons, and then we shall prosecute for manslaughter," continued Mr. Garvin. "If we can prove criminal carelessness, either on the part of the Dupont Powder Company, the shippers, the central Railroad of New Jersey, the owners or the owners of the boats on which the dynamite was being shipped, we shall prosecute. The penalty for criminal negligence which causes death in this State may be ten years in prison or a $10,000 fine or both."

Denies Dynamite on Board.

Captain James Harding, owner of the Catherine W., the steam lighter on which the explosion is supposed to have occurred, said:

"I can show by witness that my boat did not have a stick of dynamite aboard at the time of the explosion. My boat left pier 45, North River, at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. She proceeded to the Erie dock in Hoboken, shipped a quantity of scrap iron and went back to pier 45. She departed for Weehawken and warped into the pier at 11:55. In the five minutes she was at pier 71 could have been impossible to load with dynamite."

Both powder companies and the railroad have issued statements attempting to shift the blame. Vice President Pierce P. Garvin of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, has made no reply to the statement of Inspector of Combustibles James Connell that the railroad had issued dynamite licenses in Jersey City without a permit and contrary to law.

Frank A. Scott, Marshal of Jersey City, 25,000 pounds of dynamite and 1,000 pounds of fuse had been on the Communipaw pier three days before the explosion and, under the railroad lease in a fine of $25 for failure to obtain a permit and a penalty for each day's storage of the dynamite on its pier.

Two cars, containing about twelve tons of dynamite, are still on the pier. The frozen condition of the dynamite experts said, prevented it from exploding. Other sticks of rotten dynamite were found on Pier No. 7. Two more unknown have been added to the list of dead and missing, and it is believed that the killed will number fully fifty.

MAYOR PLEADS FOR CAMBRIDGE

Mayor Fitzgerald, before the legislative Committee on Roads and Bridges at the State House to-day, made a plea for "fair play" for Cambridge in the matter of apportioning the expense and cost of the maintenance of the bridges across the Charles River between Boston and Cambridge.

The Mayor favored a bill to apportion the cost and expense among other cities and towns which use the bridge, instead of confining the cost to Boston and Cambridge only. Under the present statutes the city of Cambridge pays half the cost, while Boston pays the other half. Waltham, Newton and Somerville and other cities which use the bridge are not required to pay anything.

"To compel Cambridge to pay half the cost of this bridge," said Mayor Fitzgerald, "was equal among with Boston, is ridiculous. It is neither fair nor equitable. A part o ithe cost of construction and maintenance of these bridges that cross the Charles should be borne by all the cities and towns of the metropolitan district which directly benefit. There is good reason why Newton, Waltham and the other cities should share in the cost and construction of this bridge. The Solidtors Shoma of Newton and Alan of Somerville opposed the bill.

NUN PERMITTED TO SEE FATHER'S BODY

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—For the first time in thirty years Sister Mary of the Rosary, a nun in the convent of the Good Shepherd, will be permitted to see the face of her father to-morrow. It will be a pathetic scene, for the father, James P. Lang, a retired merchant of Savannah, Ga., died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital. Special permission has been granted by Bishop O'Connell to carry the body to the chapel of the Good Shepherd Convent and there Sister Mary will pass a few moments alone beside the casket.

WOMEN'S CLUBS HEAR RABBI WISE

Park Street Church was crowded to-day by the Union of Massachusetts club women who attended the mid-Winter meeting of the State Federation, with New Hampshire's daughters acting as hostesses. The session was devoted to legislative matters, presented by Mrs. Nellie K. Rich, chairman of the legislative committee for action by the federation. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York spoke on "The Newer World of the Child." In the afternoon Mrs. Mary S. Starkweather, assistant labor commissioner of St. Paul, talked on "Modern Industry and Child Life." Mrs. Adelaide M. Godding, president of New Hampshire's Daughters, gave the address of welcome and the response was made by Miss Georgie A. Bacon, president of the federation. During the afternoon session Mrs. Bertha Wesselhoeft Swift sang a group of children's songs.

LORD STRATHCONA PROSECUTES GIRL

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Emily St. Leger, a pretty Canadian girl, was remanded for trial today upon charges filed by Lord Strathcona, the Canadian railroad builder and multi-millionaire, who alleged that Miss St. Leger fraudulently obtained money from him for charity. She wrote him letters in which she said she was collecting funds for indigent Canadians in London. She used a number of fictitious names and wrote so often to Lord Strathcona that he at length became suspicious.

GARDNER, Feb. 3.—Alleging that he failed to keep his promise of marriage, Mrs. Virginia Montville, an attractive widow of thirty-two years, has brought suit against William Dupre, aged twenty-nine, of Fall River. INOCULATED WITH ANTI-FEVER SERUM

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—Experiments are being made at the Southern Pacific Hospital with patients who are being inoculated with an anti-fever serum, which, it is claimed, will revolutionize the treatment of fever cases. Nine patients suffering from pneumonia were inoculated with a liquid extract, made from metabolic products given off by the pneumonia germ in progress of growth. In every case it is asserted the patient was cured.

WILL FOR GIRL WAS NOT SIGNED

That Mrs. Isabella M. Holt, whose estate is being contested by her son Charles Holt in the Superior Court, intended to leave her entire estate, worth $10,000, to Miss May McNaughton of No. 10 Cumberland street, was stated to-day by Attorney Guy W. Cox of No. 45 Milk street.

The attorney testified that Mrs. Holt came into his office one day early last Spring and said she wished him to draw her will; that she wished to leave the estate to Miss McNaughton, who had been her companion for seven years. The will was drawn, but the woman died before signing the document.

Miss McNaughton, who is an attractive woman of about thirty years, was in court.

Was Alone in World.

Mrs. Ellen M. Porter of No. 5 Crawford street, Roxbury, testified that she knew Mrs. Holt for several years before her death, last April. She said that she knew Mrs. Holt alone during the last years that she knew her.

"Mrs. Holt told me," said Mrs. Porter, "that she was alone in the world and that she had no relatives anywhere. She said that she suffered heart attacks and that she could not get along without Miss McNaughton. Mrs. Holt told me that she didn't pay Miss McNaughton any stipulated sum, but that she intended to do so some time. She said Miss McNaughton knew and expected to be paid at some future date."

Wanted Girl for Companion.

Mrs. Holt died at No. 5 Haviland street of heart failure. Her husband, who was employed in the parcel delivery room at the South Station, died in 1901. Shortly after Mrs. Holt met Miss McNaughton, who was employed in a white street jewelry store.

After an acquaintance of several months Mrs. Holt asked the girl to give up her position and come to live with her.

Michael J. Sughrue was appointed administrator.

In case the court decides against the plaintiff and no relatives appear to contest the estate, the property will revert to the State.

ELEANOR GLYN BACK ON A QUICK VISIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Eleanor Glyn, the English novelist, arrived on the Lusitania to-day. She said that her trip was on a matter of business concerning one of her books. "I am not seeking any thrills—not a thrill," she said.

She will stop at one of the new hotels where women are permitted to smoke in public. She was asked if she chose that hotel so that she might avail herself of this privilege. "Oh, dear, no," she replied. "I don't smoke, you know." She was asked if she deplored the fact that so many women do smoke nowadays. "Heavens, no," she exclaimed. "I don't deplore anything."

CONSTANTINO GUEST OF BOSTONIANS

Florencio Constantino, the popular tenor of the Boston Opera Company, was tendered a complimentary banquet by two score members prominent in the Boston Italian colony at the Hotel Touraine. TEACH SEX HYGIENE DR. ELIOT'S PLEA

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University is one of those who believe that sex hygiene should be taught in the public schools. DOWAGER QUEEN TO SNUB KING

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Interest was stirred to-day as never before in the announcement that Dowager Queen Alexandra, widow of King Edward, would not attend the coronation. This is the latest move in the battle for social supremacy now waged by Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra, the dowager.

The court favorites during the reign of Edward are supporting the dowager Queen and from the indications two distinct social sets may grow out of the strife quarreled in the royal family, just as they did in the dowager Queen and the other by Queen Mary.

Almost immediately following the death of King Edward rumors of friction between the two queens were heard. At first these reports did not get into print in British newspapers, nevertheless they were commonly known and formed the chief topic of gossip in clubs and at fashionable gatherings.

The Dowager Queen resented Buckingham Palace being after the King died, according to custom, she should have left there. Pals and other acts have sorely tried the patience of King George and his queen consort built an open road from Sandringham. It was rumored to-day that there will be two social camps in England and that Queen Alexandra—she objects to being called the queen mother on account of the indignity of age in the title—prefers to minister to vanity the wife of her son, the reigning monarch.

FIVE GIRLS RESCUED AT SALEM FIRE

SALEM, Feb. 3.—Five daughters of Mrs. Wladyslaw Kolodeski were rescued from death by suffocation in the house at No. 95 Derby street early to-day. Mrs. Kolodeski was aroused from sleep by the odor of smoke. Taking her infant child in her arms she rushed, thinly clad, outdoors, where her cuteries awakened those of the neighbors. Charles Munsey was among the first to respond. He was told that four little girls were in bed in a rear room of the burning house. With difficulty he made his way through the entry which was filled with smoke and finally got to the chamber where the little ones lay. They were removed to the dwelling of a neighbor.

MAINE CLUB WOMEN BRAVE SNOW STORM

AUGUSTA, Feb. 3.—About 500 club women of Maine attended the mid-Winter meeting of the Maine Federation of Woman's Clubs yesterday. The constitutional amendment regarding the extension of the term of service of the committee on education of the federation was voted down by a large majority. Mrs. French of Portland gave an interesting address and the members listening to reports of departments.

PRESIDENT WHEELER MAY HEAD PRINCETON

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—A San Francisco newspaper to-day announced that Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, is being seriously considered for the presidency of Princeton University. The only dissent to be said to come from the alumni, who think that the president should be a Princeton graduate. Wheeler is a graduate of Brown.

OREGON ABOLISHES THE WHIPPING POST

SALEM, Ore., Feb. 3.—A bill to abolish the whipping post for wife beaters in Oregon was passed yesterday by the State Legislature. This law was enacted four years ago, and since it became a statute wife beating cases have almost disappeared. The law is repealed because it was regarded a blot on the State.

FILENE CLUB HEARS PHOTOGRAPHER SEARS

Sears, a photographer of the AMERICAN staff, gave an interesting lecture, illustrated with stereoptican slides, last night before the Filene's Men's Club on the experiences of a newspaper photographer. Two hundred members were present. Over 150 slides were presented on the screen, including many photographs, taken by himself, of characters of world-wide renown. Among the women of fame whom "Dick" snapped and who were portrayed upon the screen were Julia Ward Howe, Mary Baker Eddy, Hattie Green and Mrs. "Jack" Gardner. $40,000 FIRE SWEEPS LEE

LEE, Feb. 3.—Fire early to-day destroyed two big blocks, with a damage of $40,000.

The stores destroyed were: The Heevner drug store, Rennselle's variety store, Moran's barber shop, Mrs. Mae Griswold's.

The two blocks were burned to the ground. For hours the fire threatened to destroy the entire business section of the town. Help had to be summoned from Lenox. The firemen were handicapped by low water pressure and several could be sent but twenty-five feet into the air. It was not until after the new auto truck and streamer arrived from Lenox that the fire was got under control.

Mrs. Griswold and Mrs. Dennis were sleeping on the second floor. Mrs. Griswold's cat awoke her by scratching at her face. The rooms were filled with smoke. Mrs. Dennis ran barefooted through the snow a quarter of a mile and turned in the alarm from the central telephone office.

Street car traffic was tied up by the lines of hose across the rails. The fire started from a defective chimney.

MYSTERIOUS SAFE IN ALDRICH WILL FIGHT

The Aldrich will case, which was resumed before Judge George in the Probate Court today, came to a sudden stop at noon when a lawyer for the contestants declared that he had learned of an old safe in Worcester which had not been opened since the death of the late Charles T. Aldrich of Winthrop.

Judge George ordered the case suspended until the lawyers for both sides in the case and the special administrator of the estate went to Worcester and opened the safe. This will be done tomorrow morning. The contestants believe that they will find a will in the old safe, made later than the one now being offered for probate.

The will of Mr. Aldrich is contested by his two sons. The daughter, who is left the twelfths of the estate, is not contesting but is represented by counsel at the hearings. The rest of the estate is left to Mrs. Susan H. Aldrich, a second wife. The estate was appraised at $35 a piece.

Mention of the safe was in the dispute over the amount of the estate. Charles T. Aldrich was supposed to have left a great deal of money. The contestants claim that the estate is worth not $200,000, as Mrs. Aldrich declares, but it is worth but $2,000.

Safe Has Been Found.

Announcement of the finding of the old safe came after Mrs. Aldrich had finished her testimony at the hearing this morning. Lawyer Thomas L. Brown of Worcester made the announcement while both sides stood ready to hear the testimony of Edward Forbes of Worcester that the latter had in his possession an old safe formerly owned by Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. Aldrich informed him that this safe has not been opened since the death of Mr. Aldrich, and he wished to know if he could be on hand when he got possession of it. Mr. Aldrich replied that he could. There are three drawers in the safe. Mr. O'Brien says he had been appointed by two separate drawings, and came to them frequently. This safe has not been opened since the death of Mr. Aldrich. I think, because this case goes further this should be done."

The contestants believe that the safe late will be in the old safe, as the belief that valuable papers are in it are hidden there. Lawyers would and Special Administrator Charles Gallagher will make the trip to Worcester and will be accompanied by Attorney W. J. Corbett of Providence, who is counsel for the Aldrich children.

Only One Drawer Opened.

She admitted that she had opened one drawer in her husband's safe, but say did contained only unimportant documents. That was the only drawer she opened, she said.

"Who," asked Attorney Brown, "assisted you in making your answers to the interrogatories which the court ordered you to answer?"

"Mr. Perry, one of my counsel," answered Mrs. Aldrich.

Q.—You answered them in such a way as to give as little information as you could. A.—I answered them to the best of my knowledge," replied Mrs. Aldrich.

Q.—How much property did your husband have in 1906? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—How much did he die worth in 1906 until he died in 1907? A.—I don't remember.

Could Not Remember.

Mrs. Aldrich, in fact, could not remember, according to her answers, whether her husband had given her $30,000, $75,000 or $100,000 during the last four years of his life. She said that his estate was undecided only of land in Halifax, N. S., valued at $5,000.

Counsel for the sons claim they cannot get possession of the stubs to the late Mr. Aldrich's check books, nor the commission books which would show the amount of goods sold to him during the last five years of his life.

Attorney Charles H. Perry, counsel for the widow, admitted that he had stubs and books in his possession and the court ordered him to turn over books or papers which had belonged to Mr. Aldrich over to the special administrator. There was a clash between attorneys before the court gave this mandate.

MISS LOUISE CROMWELL

EIGHT FAMILIES ROUTED BY FIRE

Fire in the four-story brick apartment house at No. 129 Hudson street, Roxbury, today gave the firemen a hard battle. The flames crept up the walls between partitions from the cellar to the fourth floor, doing damage estimated at $1,500. There are eight families occupying the house, which is owned by Joan Olsen.

Isaac Shelnwald gave the alarm and brought the children down stairs and into the street.

The men and women who had been driven out by the flames shivered in the snow until neighbors invited them in-doors, where from windows they could watch the firemen saving their homes. How the fire started is unknown.

The tenants are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Marks, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Shelnwald and child, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Pendy, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ginsberg, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lips and child, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Shelner and a lodger, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Gutsom and a lodger.

SOUTH END FIRE.

Fire today in the third floor of the building at Nos. 101-105 East Dedham street caused a damage amounting to $100 to the building and to materials stored in the rooms. The building was occupied by Israel Berman as a stable and storehouse. The cause of the fire was unknown.

THREATS SENT LORD DECIES

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The "American Girls for American Society"—whatever they may be—have sent word to Lord Decies that they purpose to prevent his marriage to Miss Vivien Gould in a letter, copies of which were sent to the press, as is threatened with violence.

The letter sent to the press read:

Lord Decies,

"Waldorf-Astoria, New York.

"Sir: This is to formally and politely notify you that your projected marriage to the daughter of rich Mr. Gould next Tuesday will not take place, and you may as well pack your trunk and go back to our native land. This travesty upon the sacredness of marriage is going to end, and to this end is formed the 'American Girls for American Society,' being composed of descendants of those who made possible this country, and who themselves propose in this fashion to counteract the future of this great republic.

"Cad That You Are!"

"You and your kind have nothing in common with this country, and, cad that you are, you are here to marry an American girl for a fortune that was made in America—that you may return to Ireland full and free to spend your days and this American girl's fortune. Well, let this convey to your mind the positive assurance that you are not going to marry. Miss Gould (and get away with it. No! A well-devised plans and positive determination must always conquer—regardless of the cost.

"Our forefathers gave their lives freely and this country of ours is what it is today and this country of ours stands for, and we, the American Girls for American Society, are willing to die ere such a cost, if need be, in order that a renewed spirit of Americanism may be instilled into the hearts of Americans to be brought to their senses.

"Look upon this all as more talk if you wish. But your program of next Tuesday will never go through. And if we can save ourselves the trouble of violence, well and good, otherwise you may depend upon us to thwart this affair of yours at all cost. And any such affairs in the future shall have likewise our attention, for we propose to make the movement national, a movement for the extension of blind passports. (Signed) "A Girl for A Society."

Says He Challenged Decies.

Another letter written on the stationery of the Hotel Imperial, Broadway and Thirty-second street, signed "John Madison Thomas," was sent to the press. The writer tells of having sent on Jan. 31 a challenge to Lord Decies, a copy of which was inclosed in the envelope containing an explanatory letter addressed "To the Press of New York." The "challenge" reads:

"Sir: As a scion of an ancient and honorable house you are prepared, I presume, to measure up to the responsibilities and obligations of a gentleman in an affair of honor which I, as an American gentleman—scion of an ancient Virginia house—do hereinafter. In view of the attention to the youthful and notoriously unsophisticated daughter of an American home in consequence of which all, I have, sir, the honor of transmitting in this fashion this challenge, upon your acceptance of which and acknowledgments my seconds will be pleased to meet representatives of your lordship for the arrangement of usual details as to time, place and weapons, etc.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
"JOHN MADISON THOMAS."

INVEST IN RUSSIA, ADVICE OF HAMMOND

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The sred a large field for American investments in Russia, says John Hays Hammond, who has been investigating Russian conditions with a view to Americanizing. Mr. Hammond arrived here today on the Cunarder Lusitania. Mr. Hammond was the agent for a billion dollar coterie of American capitalists who are going to establish new railroads, steamship lines, banks and build grain elevators and factories for the manufacture of agricultural implements in Russia. This campaign in Russia will give the United States and the Muscovite empire the control of the world's grain market.

EMMA CALVE, PRIMA DONNA, ILL IN JAPAN

MME. CALVE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 3.—Emma Calve, the prima donna, is seriously ill in Kobe, Japan, and her forthcoming American tour has been cancelled. Mme. Calve started eastward from Europe some time ago on a concert tour around the world. In India she was royally feted and she sang before many of the native Indian potentates. During her engagement in Ceylon Mme. Calve contracted a severe case of sore fever, and by the time she reached Japan she was so ill that at Kobe she was forced to abandon the tour and submit to expert medical treatment.

SAYS PEARY IS NO GENTLEMAN

CINCINNATI, Feb. 3.—F. Hopkinson Smith, novelist, artist, editor and Chesterfield of manners, gave his views on politeness today as he left the Queen City Club to dine at the home of Charles P. Taft, brother of President Taft.

"A gentleman," observed Mr. Smith, "is one who practices toleration and sympathy. Commander Peary is a great explorer, but not a gentleman. He lowered himself in the estimation of the entire world by his outburst against Dr. Cook. He lacked toleration. Theodore Roosevelt is a true gentleman. There are millions of gentlemen and most of them are among the poor.

"A rich broker spunts down on a seat in a street car and permits a tired saleslady to hang by a strap. He is a vulgarian. A rich woman enters her box in a theatre an hour late. She is a vulgarian. But if you were a tired workman, and had managed to seize a seat in a street car, and if a woman who had spent the afternoon at the theatre would enter and was obliged to stand, would you give up your seat to her?"

A moment's thought and then the reply: "Politeness is not a formula that you can put in your pocket. It's in the heart."

SAVE THIS PRESCRIPTION

The following prescription may prove more valuable than gold in time of need. For weak, disordered kidneys, bladder or other urinary organs, mix one-half ounce fluid extract buchu, one-half ounce muriatic acid, six ounces good pure gin. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time. Any well stocked drug store has the ingredients. It is easily mixed. This quickly restores these organs to their natural power of carrying off impurities. Backache, rheumatic pains and other well known symptoms must be treated promptly to be safe from more serious kidney trouble.

A BUSINESS WOMAN

Who Was Cured by Following a Neighbor's Advice Now Recommends the Same Treatment to Other Women.

Most women are subject to special forms of weakness and at one time or another need a safe reliable tonic for the blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic for women as they are also useful in functional disorders and in the fact that ladies recommend them to one another is one the enormous popularity of this tonic remedy.

Mrs. Mary E. Hecht, of Coal City, Ind., is well known there as she was formerly editor of the "Coal City Record" and now conducts a printing office.

"Some time ago," she says, "I was suffering greatly from weakness. I was sick for three years and was up and down for over a year. My stomach was in a bad condition and my digestion, my food properly. I was very nervous and could not sleep well. When a child I had a severe case of spinal fever and had never felt cured of it's effects and think this made my sickness worse.

"A neighbor told me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they had helped her. I took her advice and I got relief from the first few boxes of the pills. I took them steadily until I was cured. They gave me strength and I have had no more trouble with my spine. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are certainly a great medicine for women's ills and I always recommend them."

A booklet, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free to any woman suffering from weakness. It explains fully why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are adapted to the needs of work women of all ages and gives many helpful suggestions in regard to the care of their health.

Women will find in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the tonic exactly suited to their needs. Most of the ills from which they suffer are due to bloodlessness—a condition which the pills readily correct.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

DROPS LOOT IN POLICE CHASE

Somewhere in Boston is a wrecked pool room the location of which the police of the LaGrange street station would like to know. The police would also like to know the identity and whereabouts of a young man who was seen carrying a roll of pool table cloth and a quantity of cigarettes on Washington street, early to-day, but who escaped, after being chased several blocks by Patrolman McCreadie.

McCreadie was on Washington street, near Boylston, when he saw a young man with his arms loaded with cigarette boxes and pool table cloth. His actions were suspicious, and McCreadie decided to investigate. As he started toward the burdened individual, the latter began to run. McCreadie gave chase and the fugitive dropped the cloth and cigarettes and increased his speed. He escaped.

The cigarettes were of different brands and the cloth looked as though it might have been cut from pool tables. No report had been received at the station house of any break and a search was started for the pool room which the police are certain has been broken into and badly damaged. A description of the man who escaped from McCreadie was sent to all the stations in the city, but as yet no trace of him has been found.

DRAMA TOO COSTLY SAYS PROF. BAKER

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—George Pierce Baker, head of the English department of Harvard University, believes the cost of the drama is too much, because the exorbitant prices puts it out of the reach of the youth of the country. "Despite the fact that there are too many theatres, the prices are so high that the mission of the best drama is stifled," he said. "Children should have access to the best productions of the stage, but few parents can afford to send them when seats cost $2 and $3 and $4 apiece."

DRAPER MILL HEAD TO STAY

HOPEDALE, Feb. 3.—Robert Goodnow, foreman of the bobbin department in the Draper mill plant here, who was reported to have resigned after having received a "Black Hand" threat predicting the destruction of the mills, has issued a statement denying all this.

The report of Mr. Goodnow's resignation was published just after the Black Hand scare had caused a sensation here. It was said at that time that Mr. Goodnow was the man who received the threat and that he thereupon left the employ of the corporation.

In his statement Mr. Goodnow declares that he did not receive any such threat and furthermore is still in the employ of the Draper company and has no intention of leaving it.

CO-ED WINS CLASS OFFICE

Miss Sadie M. Lipner of Roxbury, one of the most popular coeds at the Boston University Law School, has been elected secretary of the senior class of the Law School. She is one of the first co-eds to hold the office in the history of the school.

Miss Lipner is one of the youngest members of her class and during her two years at Law School she has been prominent in all its activities. She is a member of several legal clubs and takes her place in the university court and tries her most cases with all the ability of the men students.

Miss Lipner attended the Winthrop grammar School, from which she was graduated in the class of 1905 and from the Roxbury High School in 1908. She lives at 8 No. 23 Munroe street.

GIRL'S SUICIDE ATTEMPT FAILS

Considered as kindly as possible by the hospital surgeons, the young woman closed her lips and would not answer them.

Her act is equally a mystery to her employers. Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Sammet of No. 3a Pulsifer street, Somerville, with whom she has lived for five years.

The theory of a disappointment in love lacks support because, so far as her employers know, Miss Bailey was not intimate with any young man. No had even friendly associates.

Seemed Worried.

Mr. Solomon said today:

"Ella has been with us for five years. We think she came to this country from Nova Scotia, also that she has relatives or friends in Malden, for she spoke often to that city. But we know practically nothing of her friends or her past.

"She was always obliging, quiet and faithful. She has given no indication of her act. The only thing we noticed about her yesterday was that she seemed very silent, as though she had something on her mind that worried her.

"Dr. H. E. Baker, who was called to attend the girl when she shot herself last night, had no information to give.

Expected to Recover.

At the Newton Hospital it was said that Miss Bailey would recover if no unfavorable symptoms set in. She is only twenty-four years old and has the advantage of youth and good health.

The attempted suicide took place at 8 o'clock last night. Miss Bailey went to her room at 7:00. At 8 o'clock a shot was heard from upstairs. Mr. Solomon ran to Miss Bailey's room. He found the girl unconscious on her bed. She had apparently pulled the bed clothes around her head, felt around with a 32-calibre revolver till she thought the muzzle pointed toward her head and had pulled the trigger. The bullet pierced her left breast, but did not inflict a fatal wound.

The girl was taken to the hospital where the bullet was removed. Her wound was very nearly successful. But in trying to cover herself with the bed clothes, probably in order to muffle the report of the revolver, she interfered with her aim.

11 JURORS TO HEAR THE BALDWIN CASE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 3.—Another handwriting expert, H. A. M. Gummel of San Francisco, was placed on the stand in the Baldwin will case and testified that six of the letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Lillian Ashley Turnbull to James H. Woodworth were not in the same person. It was stipulated that because of the illness of Juror Curtiss the trial will proceed with only eleven jurors.

READY FOR BIG ICE CARNIVAL

The great Lexington carnival, which has been postponed for weeks for the lack of snow, is to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening. Lexington presents a lively scene today, as people there are hustling the final preparations for to-morrow's event. Today hundreds of men and teams are tugging away at the snow in the carnival grounds, heaping it in great drifts to hide the structural work about the grounds and shaping the great cave in which the dancing hall is to be erected. Then, too, the snow is being packed down on the roads and paths so that they will be good walking in all directions from the grounds.

The postponement of the carnival for so many weeks has brought good results. The opening events have a great many more entries than at first. Additional prizes have been offered. James J. Storrow has given a cup for the tobogganing and A. Shuman has given a cup for the snow fort attacks, a bottle for each boy routed.

The Great Ice Cave.

The great ice cave in which the old-fashioned New England dinner is to be served will be one of the most beautiful features of the carnival. It is entered through a great snow arch. The walls are of ice and the roof drips with icicles. A forest of hemlock and spruce trees add to these boughs are thousands of electric lights.

The cave is warmed by electricity. Today the heaters were started so that the temperature will be right when the guests arrive to-morrow. The scene here will be unique when the guests of the evening arrive. Confetti, ticker tape and all sorts of paraphernalia for making noise will be furnished to the diners, so that when the Mayor of Montreal and his Council arrive, accompanied by Governor Foss and his staff, they will be met by a cataclysm of noise.

The climax of the carnival will be a display of fireworks. A force of 100 men are at work today installing the set pieces. The largest of these is 150 feet long, 100 feet high. This piece is merely the finale of a great display of fireworks that will precede it.

Olsen Star Performer.

The feature of the sporting events will be the ski jumping. Olsen, the greatest ski jumper in the world, will be the star performer. He turns somersaults in the air. He will do all the stunts that he is capable of from the highest of the two ski jumps of all. Every sleigh and pung that can be secured from the surrounding country has been engaged, and there will be constant service to the grounds all the afternoon and evening from Lexington square. But the committee urges all who can to come in their own sleighs and autos, for which parking space will be provided.

No badges of admission will be sold at the gate. The ticket headquarters will be in the centre of the village, but the committee asks as many as possible to secure their badges in Boston, at any sporting goods store or at Herrick's, in order to save the crowding at Lexington. The badges will be sold at $1 each, and will be good all day and evening. They will admit to all sports, and to all parts of the grounds.

ENDS MISERY FROM INDIGESTION OR A SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH,

The question us to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, Dyspepsia, or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reinforcement of digestive acents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour Risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out of order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

FORESTRY BILL URGED BY GUILD

Former Governor Guild, who is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York for a few days, following a trip to Washington, to-day in an interview telegraphed to Boston, declared emphatically in favor of the passage of the bill creating an Appalachian Mountain forest reserve. Mr. Guild said:

"The West already has its national forest reserves. The new bill is simply to extend in the name of common justice to the Atlantic Seaboard the same advantages in the conservation of forests on its mountain slopes, the conservation of its soil, its water supply and the regulation of the flow of its navigable streams that have already been given to Western States and are maintained at an expense of $4,000,000 a year, of which the East has to pay its part.

Benefit to All New England.

"While this bill is for the benefit of all the Appalachian system, including the South, it will be of particular benefit to New England. The headwaters of the Kenduskeag, the Merrimac and the Connecticut Rivers all centre in the White Mountains which for lack of the same care that has been given the West are losing not only their forests but their soil. Private benevolence is doing something, and the State of New Hampshire as far as its means permit is aiding, but the strong hand of the national government must also help if the same ruin and devastation now established in once well wooded and populous mountain districts in parts of China, southern Africa, Italy and Spain is not to come to the mountain folk of the Appalachian slope.

"The Appalachian bill has already passed the House, and the Senate has substituted the House bill for its own and set the date for the vote. The only peril lies in the devices of certain ingenious enemies who will try to amend the bill so that it will be smothered by a committee in conference owing to the short time between the date set for the vote and the dissolution of Congress. All the friends of the bill are seeking to secure its passage unamended."

Spend Nothing In New England.

"What does Massachusetts expect to get out of the Appalachian bill?" ex-Governor Guild was asked.

"Not one cent of this appropriation for national forests will be spent in Massachusetts," was the reply. "Massachusetts through the State and municipal governments already has conserved the great hills from which the State is named, together with State parks, Mount Wachusett and the greater hills in the Berkshires.

"New Hampshire, though rich in history, is not, however, rich in this world's goods, and ought not to be expected to go without the national aid so generously given to such States as Colorado and California."

QUITS RAILROAD AFTER 50 YEARS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 3.—The office of superintendent of car department of the Boston & Maine Railroad has been abolished. The business of this department will hereafter come under the supervision of General Mechanical Superintendent Henry Bartlett. Frank W. Mason, master car builder, who had charge of the shops of the car department and all wrecking crews of the system, has resigned after fifty years of service.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closely Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that the reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common in the American people, and the large majority of applicants do not even suspect that they have the disease.

He states that, judging from his own experience and reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has probably been more successful in relieving and curing these diseases than any remedy known. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise all readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes —fifty-cents and one-dollar.

However, if you wish first to test its wonderful merits, send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, absolutely free. When writing be sure and mention the Boston Daily American.

MATTHEW HALE, ARRIVING HOME ON HORSEBACK

MATTHEW HALE

HALE ARRIVES ON HORSEBACK

City Councilor Matthew Hale is back in Boston, having completed a journey from Albany to this city on horseback.

Mr. Hale is returning from the West, where he has been for two months living out of doors for the purpose of regaining his health. He was seen to-day by a reporter from the AMERICAN. He said that he thought he had gained in health, and spoke of his trip from Albany to Boston with enthusiasm.

"I have been away from Boston for two months," he said. "I went in search of health. I am not sure that I found it, but I think I did. Anyway, I feel like a fighting cock to-day. Time will tell whether I have positively regained health.

"I left Albany two weeks ago for Boston. I determined to make this last lap of my journey home on horseback. My plan was to ride for a day and then rest for a day.

"I went first to Pittsfield. From there I went to North Adams and from North Adams over the Hoosac Mountain to Greenfield. The trip over the mountain was a rough one. The roads were icy and I was compelled to walk a great deal of the way. From Greenfield I rode to Keene, N. H., and from there to Dublin, N. H. From Dublin my route took me to Fitchburg and from Fitchburg to Groton.

LADDERMAN HURT AT $2,500 BLAZE

Thomas Toomey of Ladder 8 was cut on the left hand by it running against a jagged pane of glass and a damage of about $2,500 resulted from a threatening fire in the Powars Block at Nos. 90 to 98 Blackstone street. The fire was on the top floor of the six-story building occupied by the Tailor Coat Company. Other smaller concerns in the building sustained a slight water damage. The cause of the blaze was not determined.

FATHER RESCUES HIS 2 CHILDREN AT FIRE

Two babies were rescued from their cribs by their father at No. 30 Worcester street, as they were near suffocation from smoke from a fire in an adjoining room. Hayke Grindell, the father, ran down stairs to the street with a babe in each arm. The babies were then taken for shelter to neighbors' homes.

ARRESTED FOR TAKING WHISKEY TO HUSBAND

Bridget Callahan of No. 178 Main street, Charlestown, is under arrest on a charge of attempting to give liquor to her husband, Cornelius, when he was a prisoner in the Charlestown Police Station. Callahan was locked up charged with drunkenness and Mrs. Callahan brought a pail with bottle which contained coffee and whiskey to the police station to her husband.

DIVORCE JUDGE HELPS CUPID

Cupid obtained a decree nisi in the divorce session of the Superior Court when Judge White, who is hearing cases, took a hand in the hearing of the suit of George W. Gray against Roberta B. Gray. The husband charged desertion and Mrs. Gray alleged George had been unfaithful and in reality had deserted her.

Judge White had been studying the couple closely as they testified. Finally he asked husband and wife if they would not like to live with each other again. The jarring couple looked sheepishly at each other and finally admitted that they would.

"Why not shake hands and make up?" asked Judge White. The Grays looked at each other, then at their lawyers, then again at each other, and then extended their hands. The divorce libel was dismissed without prejudice.

T. E. POWERS ASKS YOU the funniest questions you ever heard. He asks them pictorially, and you can't answer. But it is more fun than a circus when you try. See the City Life Section of the Sunday AMERICAN.

BIGNEY PAYS MAYOR WAGER

That Colonel Sidney O. Bigney of Attleboro makes no idle election bets was shown last night when he gave a dinner to Mayor Fitzgerald and a dozen others as the result of a wager he had made with the city's chief executive that Foss would not be elected Governor.

The affair was in the Republican room at Young's Hotel and to top off matters, Toastmaster J. J. McCarthy expressed the hope that Colonel Bigney would sometime occupy the office of the man that cost him the dinner.

As a ruse to block any loose remarks that the Mayor might intend making over winning the wager, Colonel Bigney sang "Sweet Adeline" as Fitzgerald entered the room.

The Mayor laughed but did not pass any remarks at the expense of his host. Besides the colonel, the Mayor and the toastmaster the following were present: Lieutenant Governor H. Washburn, U. S. N.; Judge William H. Proctor, Frederick G. Mason, Richard P. Field, William E. White, Colonel Thomas F. Tuff, Lieutenant Rufus Fessenden of the Boston police, John A. Campbell, and General William H. Oakes.

TERM "CIVIL WAR" IS NOW PREFERRED TO "THE REBELLION"

In times past people on both sides referred to the great contest as the "Rebellion," but now, for the good of the whole country, North and South, we should forgive and forget.

If the name "Civil War" will better promote this feeling we here certainly have no objection to it. Is think this expresses the feeling of most of the veterans to-day.—Comment of Commander John E. Gilman of the G. A. R., on the action of the House of Representatives striking "Rebellion" from its records.

HUNDURAS REJECTS J. P. MORGAN'S LOAN

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, Feb. 3.—A special dispatch from Tegucigalpa says the Honduras Congress has refused to approve the Morgan loan transaction, and declined the appeals of President Davila to consider further the question of ratifying the agreement which his agents made with the financial syndicate.

MALDEN FIRE LOSS $200,000

Two hundred thousand dollars is the estimate to-day of the damage done by the fire at the Converse Rubber Shoe Company plant in Malden last night. The Boston police have been unable to find a clew to the cause of the blaze.

Frank Sargent, a call man with Hose Company No. 1, was overcome by fumes following an explosion of a benzine tank.

Malden has the high water pressure system, and although steamers are ordinarily used, last night they were abandoned because of the going. Chief Turner, fearing that the apparatus would be stalled, took the steamer horses, and making a four-horse hitch for the hook and ladders and hose carts, sent them to the fire.

There were so many lines played on the fire, and on the buildings nearby and within the danger zone, that the pressure was weak and the streams failed to reach more than twenty-five or thirty feet.

The storehouse, completed last July, was valued at $17,000. The rubbers, rubber boots and raw material in it are a total loss. The structure was a two-story wooden affair, about 100 feet long by seventy-five wide.

IN 1898

reported that "the preparation fulfills ALL the requirements and presents ALL the conditions of a very satisfactory emulsion. Its appearance and consistency it is not unlike cream and under the microscope the fat globules are seen to be of perfectly regular size and uniformly distributed. So well has the oil been emulsified that even when shaken with water the fat is slow to separate. The taste is decidedly unobjectionable and the Emulsion should prove an excellent food as well as a tonic."

We believe no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil has received such weighty commendation and if the same high authorities were to examine it they would find it even finer, more digestible, more palatable and more satisfactory in every way; in fact, SCOTT'S EMULSION has so long been the one satisfactory and perfect Emulsion that it is accepted as the standard by medical practitioners all over the world, by the public and by hundreds of imitators, for it is the one and only Emulsion imitated.

The imitations are in name only for no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil is so pure, so perfect and so beneficial.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

has become the world's Standard Body-Builder because of the perfect purity of its ingredients, its absolute freedom from ALCOHOL or any other harmful substance and because the results from it are uniform and far greater than from any other preparation.

JULIAN ELTINGE WHIPS A CRITIC

PITTSBURG, Feb. 3.—Julian Eltinge, who is playing here this week as the star in "The Fascinating Widow" at the Nixon Theatre, had a one-round fight early today with a dramatic critic who used harshly of the show.

The result was a critic with a black eye and both men in the police court today to explain how it happened to the judge.

The critic, Fred Phaler, on a morning paper here had scored not only the acting of impersonating of Eltinge, but also the piece as a whole. One of his paragraphs read as follows:

"Some of the lines in the play are as rough as coke. Nothing worse has ever been heard on a stage in Pittsburg. The paper has too much self-respect to print them."

Eltinge, early in the morning, was passing the Pittsburg Press Club on the way to his hotel when the critic who had scored him was about to enter. A scrap followed him and it was then the mix-up occurred.

COULD NOT STAND SUFFERING FROM SKIN ERUPTION

Red Blotches on Face and Scalp. Disfiguring, Scaly and Dry. Began to Itch and Burn. Scratched Until He Drew the Blood.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment Entirely Relieved "That Awful Pest."

"I have been using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for the past three months and I am glad to say that they cured me of a most annoying skin eruption. It began by my noticing red blotches appearing on my face and scalp. Although they were rather disfiguring, I did not think anything of them until they began to get scaly and dry and so ten and burn until I could not stand the suffering. Then I began to use a different soap, thinking that by my old kind might hurt me, but that didn't seem to do any good. I went on two different doctors but neither seemed to relieve me any. I lost many nights' sleep in continual scratching, sometimes scratching till I drew the blood on my face and head. Then I started in to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months I was entirely relieved of that awful pest.

"If anyone seeks information as to how good Cuticura Remedies are, refer them to me as one who used it successfully. I am so delighted over my cure by Cuticura Remedies that I shall be glad to tell anybody about it. (Signed) G. M. Macfarland, 221 West 134th St., New York City, Oct. 24, 1910.

NEW PANTALOON GOWN STRIDES INTO BOSTON

Harem Skirts, Latest in Fashions, Make Their Tremont Street Debut.

Latest novelty in woman's styles to appear in Boston.

The inevitable has happened, and the pantaloon gown has reached Boston. By just what devious route the skirt walked or hobbled or pantalooned to or why the collector of the port allowed the calamity to occur, are as yet unsolved mysteries. Some say the intruder came in the dead of the night when all good Bostonians were sleeping soundly.

Others aver that an irate New York gentleman in an attempt to rid the Empire City of the pest, smuggled it into the Centre of Culture in a bird cage disguise. The fact remains, the Tremont and Boylston shops are full of them—real, regular harem skirts, slick as our Turkish ancestors were wont to besport themselves. No, dear, they don't NOT be common. The smallest sized price tag in the "most reasonable" shop bears the simple but adequate legend, "Two Hundred Dollars." You see, my dear, one must pay something for novelty.

As yet the most painstaking search has not revealed one of the latest fashions in actual operation. Not even an actress person in an endeavor to pacify a brutal dress agent, has dared make the initial attempt at avialding down Tremont street mall in the new attire.

The models now on exhibition are heavy black satin, consisting of a short, tight-fitting coat, and a skirt fitting snugly about the hips, and divided for about thirty-six inches from the ground, somewhat after the manner of a divided skirt for riding astride. This new "harem" or "pantaloon" costume is really, it would appear, a half-sister to the hobble, since it is equally as scant and has the additional feature of being divided.

Experts in the trade advise all would-be wearers to use only pure silk hose and perfectly fitting shoes, as the feet and ankles of the fair wearer are very much in evidence. The same expert suggests this costume for all women intending to refute or for those who contemplate joining the women's fire brigade.

TWELVE PEOPLE SAVED AT FIRE

LEOMINSTER, Feb. 3.—Twelve persons were rescued from being burned while they slept early to-day during a fire that gutted the handsome three-story brick apartment block, known as the Jones Building, on Central street, this place.

Mrs. Michael O'Keefe was overcome by the smoke while she lay in bed in her room on the third floor.

Miss Susie Peterson fainted after she was carried to the street by firemen down a ladder. The damage amounted to $15,000. One store was wiped out and two others were badly damaged.

Rescued Over Ladders.

Some of those rescued by the firemen are: Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Bailey and their fifteen-year-old son Harold; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin O. Cobb, C. C. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Keefe, Mrs. E. J. Peterson and Miss Susie Peterson.

The fire on the ground floor which were destroyed were: Barney S. Michelman's clothing store, stock and fixtures a total loss, damage estimated at $10,000; Mrs. E. A. Daniels's millinery store, stock destroyed or damaged, loss $400; G. A. Dreplus's barber shop, fixtures, loss $300. The rest of the damage was to the building.

The fire was one of the most stubborn the Leominster department has fought in a long time. Starting on the street floor, the flames shot upwards through the stairways and shafts. Smoke filled every part of the building and penetrated into the suites occupied as living apartments.

A quick response by the entire department here was the only thing that saved the persons living in the block from being injured or burned. Ladders were hoisted to each floor. Up those breasted intrepid, sprinting in the blinding smoke in their efforts to awaken the persons who were sleeping inside.

Fainted When Safe.

Four women were carried bodily down the ladders. The men who were aroused were able to take care of themselves. Mrs. O'Keefe was the one who suffered most from the smoke. She was revived with difficulty. Miss Peterson fainted after the firemen had placed her in safety in the street.

The rescued persons were cared for in nearby homes. All of them suffered more or less from exposure to the severe cold. They were forced to go barefooted through the snow, until neighbors came forward with loans of shoes and clothing.

The fire was first discovered in Michelman's store. Before the department apparatus responded, the flames had gained great headway, and were not checked until the entire block had been gutted.

The fire raged for four hours. The authorities began an investigation to-day to determine if possible the cause.

MARY GARDEN HAS MESSAGE

Mary Garden is in Boston. She will sing to-night in "Faust" at the Boston Opera. Miss Garden is a famous opera singer and now she intends to be an author.

"Men and Women" will be the title of a book which she is writing, and it will be devoted to the subject ideas on humanity, and American humanity in particular.

"What do you know about humanity more than other women?" asked the interviewer.

"I have run the gamut of life," replied Mary Garden. "No grand opera ever had the thrills that would be montreal to the story of my life."

Then why don't you write the story of your life?

"Perhaps I shall some day when I am old."

"What shall you say in your book?"

"The first chapter will be devoted to the American woman. She is the most lovable woman that ever lived, but a woman who was born for love and nothing else."

American Women Lazy.

"I shall show how the American woman is lazy, how she sits at her window and watches and waits; how she thinks the man should do everything, and that all she need do is smile at him.

"American women lack ambition. They are extravagant, they believe they hold a man in the hollow of their hand and are bound to support them.

Then Miss Garden declined to be interviewed don't forget that Miss Garden does sing occasionally and sometimes adds a mark on it.

"I despise a woman that lacks ambition. That is the reason I don't like most women. They don't know how to retain a man. They don't know how to appeal to him. They think they are it.

"Another thing about American women and I might say every woman in the world, because the strain of it is in them all of us, they are always trying to shift the other person's load once in a while.

"Don't think that I am going back on my own country and I think that I am the happiest. For Mary Garden has seen the world—she knows it—and I want to tell you that the American woman, with all of her faults, and I might say with all of my faults compounded, way down in the bottom of her heart is the best woman in the world, but she don't know."

"Now, Miss Garden, what is your idea of the American man?"

She laughed.

"The American man is a problem. He is the best in the world and sometimes he is the worst in the world. He just falls in love and then he goes the limit.

"He showers money and gems and then he wins the girl.

"What does he do then? He takes her into a nice little house and settles down thinking that her love for him will last always. When he does this he thinks that he is kind. He doesn't know that she always wants love.

"He begins to get practical. He begins to think of dollars and cents, and now, after he puts her in a home, he should be able to put her in a palace. Then he begins to pile up the dollars, and he thinks that she is interested in them, but she is not. She begins to lose her idea of extravagance, and wants just a few things. It is the old story of evolution. First the Woman extravagant and the man economical; now it is the woman economical and the man extravagant.

Keep the Date Secret.

"Several years ago—you can find out how long, but I am going to trust to your honor that you won't say how long—when I was in Paris. I spent all of the money that king Edwards in Chicago had sent me. I had made no progress. No engagements were mine.

Suddenly I was broke. Sybil Sanderson was then the rage of Paris. She was at the Opera Comique and had a great voice. I told her my story. She invited me there. She took me to see the reigning Louise of Paris. I went back to the house, but I was still in American girl. I was afraid of Louise and practiced all I could think of 'Louise' on the piano. Finally one day Miss Sanderson was called to the telephone from the Opera Comique. One of the opera Comique had broken down.

"Do you know any one who can sing Louise?

"I heard Miss Sanderson say: 'Why, I can't think of a good Louise.'

"I shouted: 'I am a good Louise.'

Sue laughed.

"Then I went to the phone and I talked to the man and he said: 'Come around.'

"She broke down in the second act, and Mary Garden, the girl who had wandered her money without accomplishing anything, went out, and was applauded in. It was the proudest moment of my life. I have had this for the first time, and by message to American women I—"

Why I Lost My Job

Reasons Why Thousands Like Me Cannot Satisfy Their Employers.

Believe me late is not quite but oftentimes as the case may be. We lose our places for reasons they do not know, and probably would not believe. When their last pay envelope comes along it is usually the first we are longer to suspect. If the truth were known, the reason for their unceremonious removal probably be that their personal appearance destroyed because of some constitutional weakness or general indisposition. These things, as we all know, are the most trivial causes of failure in all walks of life. Many a position is lost because of a bad complexion. In this quick age one hands must be clean, rapid, active and free from outside influence or appearance. Many a girl loses her place on account of "floaters" who go from one place of employment to another, giving no satisfaction to others or to themselves, constantly meeting obstacles and fearful, with no ambition, no will power and no hope.

Every man requires from every other man the best that is in him. But no man can give us the best that is in himself until he is first free from all bodily indispositions and worries.

That was my trouble. I was full of troubles. That's why I lost my job. My stomach in the first place was always out of order, and I was worrying about it and my mind grew cloudy, and I was irritable and grew grim by. That was the end.

There are thousands like me, many times still "out of work" because they are not physically active atmospheres. No employer wants dull men's services.

Take my advice. A healthy stomach is half the battle, for it keeps your mind clear, and your face rosy. I have a healthy stomach now and hold a good position, and my employer is satisfied and so am I.

I started to take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets which I was told were good for the worst cases of indigestion and dyspepsia. The first box I took made a wonderful difference in my condition.

One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digests 3,000 grains of food. These tablets don't have to work at all. The Tablets do all the work, no matter how heavy your meal.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure flatulence, sour stomach, heartburn, lack of energy, loss of appetite, nausea, headache, belching, nervousness, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their worst forms.

No other pills tablets in the world can do as much. You should carry them around with you wherever you go and take them regularly after meals. Then you will realize what it is to be free from stomach torment, and have a clear mind, a quick memory, a happy disposition, comfort and rest. Robert Strang MacRae, formerly of Boston, is under arrest in Chicago, charged with stealing valuable books from the library of the University of Chicago. When MacRae's rooms were searched more than seventy books were found. MacRae is remembered at Harvard and at Lehigh University, from both of which institutions he is said to have stolen books. He graduated from both of these places. The authorities here say that MacRae is known as to his sanity. Since his arrest many volumes have been recovered from MacRae. Some of these were from the libraries of Harvard University, Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, The Church of the Advent in Boston, Trinity College at Newport, R. COMMISSIONER O'MEARA ADMITS VICE IS FLOURISHING IN BOSTON either actually engaged in the commission of crime or were open to prosecution as idle and disorderly persons.

How the Police Work.

"The work of the police for the suppression of open immorality in the streets took the form of prosecution of common night walkers, and of women and girls not property to be classed as common night walkers, but nevertheless guilty of immoral acts and conduct. As night walkers offend the public, the police were able to make substantially as many prosecutions as in 1909, the figures for the last four years being, 169 in 1907, 240 in 1908, 375 in 1909 and 366 in 1910.

"An attempt to close a house by means of an injunction against the owner of the real estate was described in last year's report. The procedure is based on Revised Laws, chapter 101, section 8, but has long been known to the police, through actual experiment, as of no value for such a purpose. At the request, however, of an officer of a private organization, and as a further test of the law, the police department aided in securing an injunction against the owner of the house. No contest was made by the respondent and the injunction became operative September 14, 1909.

"The theory of the law and the belief of interested though inexperienced persons is that, with an injunction against the further use of the house the owner of the real estate would be in contempt of court, and subject to imprisonment if the house were again so used. But in line with previous experience the title of the real estate was almost immediately transferred to another person, and as against the new owner the injunction had no force.

Patrolmen Watch Premises.

"Meanwhile the police had continued to watch the house and to search it with warrants, women No. 1, who was in charge of the premises when the injunction was sought, though not the owner of the real estate, having turned the management over to women No. 2. When the last annual report of the police department was closed, November 30, 1910, the house was apparently occupied by permanent male lodgers.

"But woman number 2 gradually took up the old practices, and in consequence of evidence secured by the police in February, 1910, a warrant for her arrest was applied for. It was refused by the court on the ground that it appeared that she had given up business at that place. What she had really done was to transfer the management to woman number 3, which in the plan usually followed in such cases.

"The police were compelled to begin their work over again with woman number 3, and it was not until November, 1910, that they secured evidence enough to take her to court. She was arrested, and after her case had been continued she pleaded guilty, paid a fine of $50 and turned the house over to woman number 4.

Five Different Proprietors.

"December 3, 1910, the police had sufficient evidence to ask for a warrant for woman number 4, which was granted, but she kept out of the way, woman number 5 taking her place, and was not arrested until December 28, when the case in court was continued to January 6, 1911.

"The record of this particular house in the past two years illustrates many aspects of the contest which the police are carrying on against the business of vice, but especially and most discouraging of all, I venture to say, is that attitude of the courts which makes it easy for keepers of houses of ill fame to avoid conviction, and when convicted after all, to escape, in many cases, with petty fines.

"When court results are considered it is hardly an exaggeration to say that in cases such as the following the police are wasting their time and the laws are brought into contempt. A woman controls a house of eight suites. She lives in one of the suites, rents more or less of the choosers, and two have been used for years for immoral purposes. They are barricaded like old-fashioned gambling houses, so that when the police appear and are seen through a peephole, they are unable, as a rule, to gain entrance in time to secure incriminating evidence. From December 1, 1907, to March 3, 1908, seven different women were the ostensible keepers of the place. On the latter date the seventh woman was convicted of keeping a house of ill fame, and the penalty was a fine of $50. Under these conditions a policeman in uniform was stationed in front of the house from August 16, 1908, to October 10, 1909. The business apparently was too profitable to be given up readily, but it was damaged to such an extent that on the latter date the apartments were vacated. In a few months, however, business was resumed. From April 10 to November 20, 1910, the place was searched twenty-one times by the police, and the only success, if a fine of $50 imposed by the court can be called a success, was the conviction of the woman who was the ostensible keeper in August, 1910. It is practically useless to attempt to collect evidence when the results are such as these. On this point I may appropriately repeat what I said in my annual report two years ago:

Quotes From Former Report.

"It is hard to believe that the Commonwealth should condone such an offence as this for any sum of money paid, and especially for a pittance that can be charged to the profit and loss account without embarrassment to the business or interruption of its successful progress.

"In previous reports I have spoken of the gradual disappearance of the old-fashioned houses of ill fame—single houses with resident inmates. The movement has continued through the past year, and among those which gave up business is worth while to mention three houses standing together in a short street between Howdoin square and the State House, of which had been carried on for a generation. The character of their trade may be judged from the fact that when the furniture of one of them was sent to an auction room it was estimated to have cost $18,000. Police pressure accounts in a large measure for these surrenders, but the most important instrumentality in the change which for good or evil has taken place in the business of vice is the telephone, with the modern system of operation which throws its use upon not only to subscribers but to the whole public.

The "Telephone House."

"The 'telephone house,' as it has come to be known, and in most cases it is but an apartment, is practically an exchange, in which the tenant, without keeping women in the place, fills orders, so to speak, and even when the police become suspicious and arrive with a liquor search warrant, which is their only legal suit practicable means of securing entrance, they usually find nothing incriminating on the premises. A person carrying on the business in this way receives messages by telephone from men, and has at her call numbers of women and girl who use the telephone at stated times to learn whether or not they are wanted.

"The telephone is essential, also, in a large number of cases in which women live alone, or usually two together, in the small flats which have become so numerous. By its use men can arrange with the women and the women can communicate one with another from house to house. In one police division which contains no known houses of ill fame, in the sense in which the term has heretofore been used, seventeen places were searched in 1910, fifteen of which were flats of this character. In all the seventeen places evidence of violation of the laws was obtained, resulting in the arrest of two persons for illegal sale of liquor and of thirty-five persons for other offences. But not in a single case was the evidence sufficient to establish a charge of keeping a house of ill fame.

Lodging House Problems.

"Lodging houses in great numbers, where no questions are asked," and men and women may come and go at pleasure, peopled they make no disturbance, are practically beyond the reach of the police except in cases in which criminal practices are carried on to such an extent that it is possible, through an unexpected search, to secure evidence of a character and quantity to convince a court. In one place six persons were arrested and convicted. On the strength of that evidence the proprietor was arrested on a charge of keeping a house of ill fame, but was discharged by the court. In another case twenty-six persons were arrested and convicted, and the two proprietors were fined, respectively, $50 and $100. Again, with ten arrests and convictions, the keeper of the house was fined $75; and in still another, with eight arrests and convictions, the keeper was placed on probation. Similar instances, though less marked, have been numerous.

"I am aware that some hotels of the lower class are large contributors to the convenience of mercenary vice. In a few cases in which the police were able to show that women were allowed to loiter on the premises for immoral purposes, and afterwards committed criminal acts, the managers of hotels of this kind have been convicted and their business has been destroyed. Even the most carefully conducted hotels cannot question their guests and determine their legal relations to one another; but there are hotels of another kind, whose managers are careless, and ready to profit. To this latter class the police will continue to give particular attention.

Public and Police.

"The police department regards the business of vice as a social tragedy which has gone on from the beginning and, presumably, will continue to go on to the end; but police action against it is confined, of necessity, to the attempted enforcement of the laws. The police have no other mission or authority, and their efforts to reduce the profits of the business, to secure the adequate punishment of those who engage in it, and thus to check its growth, have met with practically no help ful or appreciative response from any direction. If a future Police Commissioner were intending to pursue the same course with respect to the business of vice that has been followed for four years, I should advise him that he might expect loyal support from the police when once he had convinced them that he was in earnest little encouragement from courts; no active hostility from persons whose profits were curtailed; indifference from the public; and from a few enthusiasts in the cause of social purity, whose admirable purposes are not sustained by straight and intelligent thinking, he would be sure to receive some measure of abusive criticism. I should advise him that, unless he held his oath of office in high regard, and cared for no reward other than the consciousness that he had done his duty faithfully and with some benefit to the community, it would be better for him personally that he should follow the easy road of indifference, which is always chosen by those who are officially blind.

WATCH AND WARD SOCIETY OBJECTS TO O'MEARA'S VIEWS

Efforts to reduce the profits of the business of vice, to secure the adequate punishment of those who engage in it, and thus to check its growth, have met with practically no helpful or approchiate response from any direction.—Police Commissioner O'Meara.

The Watch and War. Society has, during the last year, been especially active. A number of arrests have been made through its efforts, and convictions secured. I do not know whether Mr. O'Meara considers this helpful or not, but it is so. Mr. O'Meara is, as has been shown, antagonistic to the society.—Rev. Frederick B. Allen, President of the Watch and Ward Society.

"The following features of this one day's record, which in almost all respects, except the number of arrests, is typical of the whole year, deserve particular notice:

"1. The nonresidents were 52.29 per cent., a proportion in excess of the normal, for the nonresidents arrested for drunkenness in the entire year were 47.86 per cent. of the whole number. An interesting detail is the fact that of 110 persons arrested in the North and West Ends only twenty-five were residents of any part of Boston.

"2. The women arrested numbered but seventeen in a total of 247. Only two were under thirty years of age, one being twenty-two, the other twenty-seven; and of those remaining, eight were between thirty and forty, three between forty and fifty, two between fifty and sixty, one was sixty and one was sixty-five. Six of the women were arrested in one division in a tenement house caravan, two being taken at midnight Saturday and four at 5 o'clock Sunday morning. That these six were old offenders was shown by the fact that they ranged from thirty-five to sixty-five years of age, and that all were sent away, three to the State Farm and three to the House of Correction. Four of the seventeen were non-residents. It is a remarkable circumstance that nine of the fifteen land divisions contributed not one woman resident up the number arrested. No woman, for instance, was arrested who lived at the North End, the West End, or South Boston; and I mention those sections in particular because together they have a population of more than 150,000 persons, the great majority of whom are poor or in moderate circumstances.

"3. Again, taking the same three sections which furnished no women residents to the list, the returns show among the arrests in all parts of the city only nine men who lived at the North End, ten at the West End and eighteen at South Boston.

Punishment and Probation.

"For many years before 1882 the usual punishment for a first offence of drunkenness was a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to about $7.50. In 1882 the fine was reduced to $1 and costs, and later, through the establishment of the probation system, the fine for a first offence, unless attended by disorder or other misconduct, practically disappeared.

"There is a general lack of information on the part of the public as to the lenient and yet legal course of treatment received in Boston by persons arrested for drunkenness who are not known to be old offenders. A certain custom of the police of a Western city has caused the public exploitation of what is called the 'learned court,' and many good citizens have suggested that the 'court' be established in Boston. The 'learned court' consists simply in this, that early in the morning the officer in charge of a police station in that city examines the men who have been arrested for drunkenness, and, according to his judgment or inclination, discharges such of them as he chooses, the advantages of being that they are not compelled to appear in court and will be in time to go about any work which they have.

Relic of the Past.

"This method may be an advance over those previously followed in that city, but it is a crude and unlawful form of a system established by law and carried on by lawful processes in this country for nearly twenty years. No policeman has a right under our laws to discharge a man who has been arrested for a specific offence. Those taken into custody merely as suspicious persons may be set at liberty, but for the protection of the citizen himself it is required that if arrested he shall be arraigned in court. The man arrested for intoxication may escape arraignment, but through a system that is strongly safeguarded. Here is the method of operation, under specific provisions of law, of the Boston 'learned court':

"At 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning the officer in charge of a station has brought before him all men under arrest for drunkenness who have become sober enough to meet the requirements of the law. He tells them that each has a right to make and sign a statement, giving his true name and address, the number of persons dependent upon him and his place of employment, declaring that he has not been arrested for drunkenness within the twelve months next preceding, and asking that he may be released, on what is commonly called personal bail. This printed form is not a police document; it is prepared by the municipal court, and the police assist the man in filling it properly.

"Of the five divisions in the city proper, in which most of the arrests are made, the men are taken to the city prison with their statements. Probation officers are in immediate attendance there, as at the station houses which send prisoners to other courts. The probation officers are not policemen.

Law Only Basis of Action.

"Within the year I had occasion to make to the public the following statement:—

"The only purpose of the Boston police is that policemen, above all persons, shall respect the law; and if the time ever comes when, by the direction of either their superiors or in response to special agitation, the police assume authority which the law does not give them, and thus themselves become law breakers, the people of Boston will be the sufferers. Such occurrences, as well as those of New York, are constantly praising Mayor Gaynor of that city for his attempts to bring its police back to the solid basis of law; and yet some of the same Boston newspapers, and doubtless many citizens, criticise at this time the Police Commissioner of Boston as narrow and technical because he has insisted steadily and still insists that the police for whom he is responsible shall follow the law at all times, not their own impulses.

"I regard the strict observance of the laws as the most important lesson to be impressed upon the police of any city. Their authority is no more than that of a private citizen except in so far as such authority is conferred upon them specifically by the laws. Therefore, to the police in their official capacity the laws should stand as paramount to all other powers or influences. The temptation to break the laws is to go outside of them for the sake of securing what may appear at the time to be an advantage to the community should always be resisted. If the people of Boston are not well educated on this point we are their police, the police would be derelict if they fail to 'clean out' this or to 'suppress' that when neither can lawfully be done. No man without police experience can know the difficulties with which citizens demand of policemen action which the laws do not permit them to take. The spirit of 'lynch law' seems to be in all crimes of climes, and to manifest itself in individuals whenever their own profits or comforts are jeopardized.

"Use Only Lawful Methods."

"Obedience to law, with the use of none but lawful methods, is the rule of action in the Boston police department; but some of the large cities of the United States have not yet learned that rule. A magazine article lately published describes with praise the lawless practices, for ostensibly noble purposes, of the police of a Western city, concerning which it explains:

"At no stage a legal proceeding; it was police work, through and through. If you look long and hard enough at this subject the contradiction between legal and police methods becomes sublime!

"It is natural that a writer with such a notion of police duty, in a country supposed to be governed by law, should describe as 'archaic' the Boston belief that the police should never themselves become law breakers, even to gain advantage over a criminal. Part of the 'sublime contradiction' between legal and police methods in the city which had won the magazine writer's admiration was the police 'permission' to saloonkeepers to do business on Sunday contrary to law, if they would use only their side doors; and to keepers of disorderly houses to carry on their operations in localities indicated by the police. In another Western city the attempts were such that the magazine writer commended the police authorities for urging out the 'State-made blue laws,' and allowing all manner and theatres to be open on Sunday; with, of course, the customary free areas for disorderly houses.

"The time will come when the police of such cities, weary of the violence and corruption which surely follow such lawlessness, will try to struggle back to the solid basis of law, which is the rule of the Boston police.

Arrests for Drunkenness.

"The subject of the increase in arrests for drunkenness in Boston has been discussed a good deal in the last year or two. After careful study of the matter, I feel sure that a large part of the figures of such arrests may show, they furnish no conclusive evidence in any year or series of years to prove that drunkenness among the people of Boston is increasing.

"As an introduction to the study of this subject an analysis of one day's arrests, probably the heaviest for the year, may first be presented. The daily police reports received Sunday, March 27, 1910, showed that in the twenty-four hours at the police day ended at 8 o'clock that morning there had been 327 arrests for drunkenness. Saturday arrests are always more numerous than those of any other day, and this particular Saturday was the eve of the festival of Easter. In order that a thorough analysis of the arrests for drunkenness on one such day might be made, special reports were called for from all police division on the Monday following.

The 171 persons who were not residents of Boston were registered as follows:

Outside Massachusetts	19	Everett	10
No home	13	Everett	8
Foreign	9	Quincy	8
Cambridge	17	Revere	5
Chelsea	10	Somerville	5

"Probation work is carried on by three men and three women in the Superior Court and by sixteen men and five women in the lower courts. The statistics for that work in the police year are not available, but on the assumption that they are in proportion to those of the succeeding year, it will be found that many more than twenty-seven thousand persons arrested in Boston for drunkenness in 1910 were released lawfully when sober by court officers, but without going to court; that thousands of others, though appearing in court, suffered no punishment, and that those punished were a small minority.

"The fact is that the police are in a large measure the caretakers of great numbers of men who voluntarily become intoxicated; that their arrest saves them in many cases from injury, death or worse; that when they need a doctor or a hospital they receive the benefits of either or both without cost; and that while awaiting action upon their cases they are even fed from the agents of the police.

"Arrests From Proper Motives."

"Considering all the conditions which I have described it is not strange that arrests for drunkenness in Boston have been discussed a good deal in the last year or two. After careful study of the matter, I feel sure that a large part of the figures of such arrests may show, they furnish no conclusive evidence in any year or series of years to prove that drunkenness among the people of Boston is increasing.

CENTENARY OF HORACE GREELEY

The centennial anniversary of the birth of Horace Greeley was observed today in this country.

It was honored in Amherst, N. H., where he was born on February 3, 1811.

It was likewise honored in and about New York City, where he attained fame as an editor, advocate of freedom, and political factor.

The Greeley celebration extended, also, to the Far West. It was particularly emphatic at Greeley, Colo., the community named for him.

The western part of the country acknowledged a special debt in that commemorating Horace Greeley. For he was the great, original advertising agent of the Golden West. It was Horace Greeley who penned the immortal line: "Go West, young man, go West." This line has not been surpassed by any high-salaried publicity promoter of the present generation for pith and power. Thousands of adventurous, courageous young men followed this advice. Westerners, observing the Greeley centenary to-day, realized that the tremendous boom given their prairie country in the early days was due in large measure to the far-seeing Eastern editor, who forecasted the boundless possibilities of the region on the sunset side of the Mississippi.

Gala Day for Amherst.

The chief Eastern celebration was naturally at Greeley's birthplace, the town of Amherst, N. H. Toohy was a gala one for Amherst. It was ushered in with sunrise tollcalling. A "Greeley" dinner, an old-fashioned New England repast, was served at noon in the old County Circuit house, now known as the Town Hall.

At 2 o'clock centennial exercises were begun. The Rev. Charles Ernest White, chairman of the celebration committee, presided. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Thomas Chalmers of Manchester, N. H. Chairman White read several tributes to Greeley by editors from Maine to California. Especial applause was given a greeting from Greeley, Colo., and one from Mrs. Gabrielle Greeley Glendenin of Chappaqua, N. Y., only living child of Horace Greeley. Poe. Harvard quartet sang.

John H. Condon of Manchester spoke for the New Hampshire Press Association and Arthur B. Rotch of Milford for the New Hampshire Weekly Publishers' Association.

The oration of the day was delivered by Attorney-General Albert E. Pillsbury of Boston. He gave an exhaustive review of the life of Greeley. He was an intimate friend of Greeley.

At Greeley's Birthplace.

The celebration committee included Rev. Charles Ernest White, Representative to L. P. Wyman, E. F. Fowler, Judge William Cirelle and Harold H. Wilkins.

One of the chief points of interest at the Amherst celebration was the little house where Horace Greeley was born. The low, pitch-roofed little structure stands in good repair. A tablet placed on the house twelve years ago reads:

> In This House
> HORACE GREELEY
> Was Born, February 3, 1811.

In New York the Greeley observance took place in the aldermanic chamber at 2 o'clock. Francis P. Bent, vice-president of the Board of Aldermen, presided. Speakers included General Daniel E. Sickles, General Horatio King, William G. McAdoo and Albert E. Heuschel.

At Chappaqua, Westchester County, N. Y., where Greeley had his home during the greater part of his life, a monument to him was dedicated in front of the Greeley homestead. His daughter, Mrs. Glendenin was present and distinguished men and women journeyed there to pay honor to the great editor.

Boston's Observance.

For Boston there will be a public observance of the Greeley centenary next Sunday in Huntington Chambers Hall, No. 30 Huntington avenue, at 2:30 p. m. The exercises will be under direction of Horace Greeley Lodge, Knights of Pythias. The principal address will be by George W. Pettingill, P. G. C. Clifford E. Jones, P. C., and others will speak.

A brief outline of the life of Horace Greeley runs thus: Born February 3, 1811, at Amherst, N. H.; moved to Poultney, Vt., in 1825; worked as printer's apprentice; went to New York city in 1831; worked for a while as journeyman printer; started "The New Yorker," a weekly publication, in 1834 with James Winchester; after two years of struggle the paper was abandoned; founded the New York Tribune in 1841; representative to Thirtieth Congress 1848-49 to fill a vacancy; toured Europe in 1851; wrote his famous series of travel letters to the Tribune; presidential elector 1856; delegate to Philadelphia Loyalists' convention in 1866 and to State constitutional convention in 1867; one of Jefferson Davis's bondsmen in 1867; nominated as presidential candidate of Greeley party in 1872; defeated by President Grant after spirited fight; died November 29, 1872, at Pleasantville, N. Y.

GRISCOM AND ARNOLD FIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Immediately following publication of cable dispatches from Florence, Italy, giving details of a personal combat between John W. Arnold, broker of the missing heiress, Dorothy Arnold, and George S. Griscom, jr., of Pittsburg, it became known to-day that Mrs. Arnold, the girl's mother and Griscom are racing across the ocean to New York, the young man two days in the lead. The dispatches telling of the fight between young Arnold and Griscom give the details substantially as follows:

Arnold and his mother called at the Florence Hotel, where Grisom was stopping, and asked him for a letter which had been written to him by the missing girl and which he had in his possession.

Griscom refused to give it up and Arnold struck him. Griscom grappled with his opponent. However, he was no match for Arnold. The latter struck his opponent a smashing blow in the face, knocking him to the floor. Then he took the letter away from him. It was reported that two of Griscom's teeth had been knocked out by Arnold.

Mrs. Arnold, accompanied by the two Misses Schackleford, old school chums, sailed on January 27 from Naples for New York on the steamship Panonia. She will arrive here next Thursday, two days after the day Griscom is expected.

Francis L. Arnold, the girl's father, today abandoned his belief that his missing daughter, Dorothy, is dead. He made this announcement after he had received a mysterious message from Philadelphia, where his son is seeking the girl, missing for 52 days.

"We believe Dorothy is in a convent in or near Philadelphia," was all the father would say regarding the message, however.

Sensational developments are expected. No explanation of the 3,500-mile race has yet been forthcoming. While the scene of the search was transferred to Philadelphia to-day, nevertheless the police in this city were trying to find a strange woman who has mysteriously entered the case. John W. Arnold, Dorothy's brother, and John S. Keith a lawyer, made a hurried trip to Philadelphia, following information which came into their possession from a man whose name is not revealed.

WIVES KILLED BY EX-SULTAN

SALONICA, Feb. 3.—Abdul Hamid Mohammed, former Sultan of Turkey, has gone violently insane, has killed two of his wives and is to-day confined in irons. The murder of the two women who were among those who accompanied Abdul Hamid from Constantinople when he was exiled by the Young Turks was particularly brutal. He clubbed one of them to death with his own hands and dashed the other so violently against the wall that she died a few hours later according to one of the men who have been guarding the deposed ruler at the villa where he is spending his last days.

The exile was subdued only after a fierce struggle in which he himself was severely injured.

Abdul Hamid is confined in a dungeon beneath the Villa Allatini, which, while set apart for him as a residence, is in reality his prison. He was said there on April 27, 1909, when the Turkish army established itself in the Young Turk party was finally completed and Mohammed V ascended the throne.

Abdul Hamid had reigned for thirty years up to that time, had deluged his empire in blood and had spent $200,000,000 spies to betray their fellow citizens. He was noted for having tricked the diplomats of all Europe and from time to time astounded the world by his sensuality and cruelty.

When Abdul was sent to the villa here his wife, which was allowed to accompany him, was composed of five sultanas, or full wives, four odalisks, inferior wives, fifteen ladies, or lady housekeepers, privileged to go out of the harem, two eunuchs, his daughter and nine servants.

This really gave him the allowance of twelve wives.

MEXICANS READY TO SHELL CITY

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 3.—Juarez was to-day proclaimed the provisional capital of the revolutionary party by General Orozco, the insurgents' leader, just passed the two hundred mile mark on his march to give the federal commanders full time to receive the warning. The ultimatum will probably be sent to-morrow or next day and the fall of the city is certain if the federals attempt a fight.

The citizens of Juarez spent the night in momentary anticipation of attack. Toward midnight rumors gained circulation to the effect that the hour of bombardment was at hand. At midnight it was officially declared that the rebel messenger who was carrying the ultimatum-sent to the federals and Americans consulate had been arrested by federal officers and was being held in the consulate.

None of these reports had official confirmation. There was little sleep in the threatened precincts of the city, however, for so far as known, the insurgents had an artillery capable of bombarding the city.

The guard of United States troops at the two bridges connecting Juarez with El Paso was doubled during the night to prevent any insurrector from the Texas side crossing the Rio Grande.

A Mexico Northwestern passenger train arrived here to-day from Juarez, Chihuahua and Rio Grande, whence it had been ordered to El Paso by Colonel Hangord, commanding the rebels of Juarez. The soldiers did not come with the train, however, as the train was refused to haul them. The train was twice fired on by insurrectos while approaching Juarez was practically deserted last night. Its people having fled to this city, over the range of explosives and was all the Mexican postoffice and two branch banks in Juarez were closed after all money and records had been brought here by soldiers.

Federal soldiers arriving under orders from Chihuahua City to reinforce Juarez at the approach of the insurrectos were also reported to be in trouble. Twenty miles out from this city a train was sent out to drive into the tracks of the Mexican Central railway, over which a train was going northward toward Juarez loaded with soldiers. The train bearing the insurrectos ran over a mine of dynamite, which exploded, shattering one of the coaches, but it is not known how many persons were killed. The fireman of the locomotive was blown to pieces, but the engineer, now operating the engine, escaped and was not seriously hurt. The locomotive passed safely over the charge of explosives and was not damaged.

HURLBURT EXPLAINS ART OF TRAPPING LYING WITNESSES

Help a witness to exaggerate. Give him plenty of rope that he may hang himself in the eyes of the court. If you catch a witness lying make him contradict some assertion, and one contradiction will lead to another, which with a good cross-examination by the attorney will cause him to leave the stand discomfited. Liars seldom have good memories, and if you question the truth of their assertions in one instance they will almost without question make a radically different statement on second examination. — Advice of Henry F. Hurlburt to law students.

GAS, LEAK AND CANDLE--BOOM!

His anybody here seen Maurice Rosenbaum of Salem street?

Rosenbaum, who is a plumber's helper, was left alone in the basement of No. 48 Richmond street to-day while Leventhal went to the shop to get some pipe.

Rosenbaum shut off the gas and began cutting out the old piece of pipe which was going to be replaced by one of the new pipe. Close beside him was the lighted candle. A cut was made in the pipe and the gas flared up. Rosenbaum evidently didn't like the appearance of flame for he fled from the scene and has not been seen since.

Patrolman Murphy of the Hanover street station saw flames and smoke issuing from the house. He began an investigation and found the gas leak. Then he turned in an alarm to the office extinguished the fire.

CHARGES PACKEY ATTEMPTED FAKE

MEMPHIS, Tn., Feb. 3.—That Packey McFarland attempted to fake in his bout with Jack Britton on Monday night, was the charge made to-day by Matchmaker Hauck of the Armory A. C. Hauck claims Packey would have been successful if Britton had been willing to be a party.

Hauck says he saw the men whisper to each other in the fourth round, and that when he quizzed Britton, the latter said McFarland had said: "Take one on the jaw." "I told Jack that if he did," declared Hauck, "that he would not get a cent."

HOPEFUL HOPES; HOPELESS HOPES; AND PLAIN HOPES

HERE is a brief summary of the happenings to each of the "white race hopes" named since July 5, when they became hopes:

AL KAUFMAN—California, formerly known as "One Round" Kaufman, 6 feet 1 inch in height, weight 205 pounds, twenty-five years old—fought Bill Lang, Al Kubbie and Tony Ross. Knew fight six rounds to decision. Is now challenging Jeffries, seemingly willing to see if he can train the Alfalfa King as quickly as did Johnson. SOME HOPE.

CARL MORRIS—Idol of Sapulpa, Okla., 6 feet 4 inches in height; weight 240 pounds, twenty-six years old. Has had five fights, four of them with Oklahoma trial horses, one with Marvin Hart. Won each fight with knockout. Announces that he is not ready for Johnson, wishing to gain more experience before regaining the title for the white race. VERY HOPEFUL.

JACK LESTER—"Tommy Burns's Avenger," 176 pounds, more than 6 feet in his socks. Terrific puncher, knocked out Pete Hudson, of Seattle, in fourth round on January 19. Previously had won two fights over unknown men. Matched to fight old lawyer Ed Martin in Denver, but police prevented bout. May be sent after Johnson by Champion Tommy Burns. SOME HOPE.

JIM STEWART—Weight 220 pounds; age, about twenty-five; well over 6 feet in height. Badly beaten by Jim Barry on November 26 in this city; stopped by Jack Sullivan in Brooklyn. Claimed that he twisted his ankle and nearly died as result. Has announced retirement forever. NO HOPE.

BILL LANG—Australian. Saw Johnson fight Jeffries. Last heard of Petty officer Curran in England. Land lost on a foul. NO HOPE.

BOMBARDIER WELLS—Licked by Gunner Moir in England in short fight. HOPELESS.

GUNNER MOIR—Although he beat Wells, he made a poor showing, and was sent to the mat several times. IN WELLS'S CLASS.

CON O'KELLY—Big Irishman, who came to this country as a wrestler. Picked up by Tommy Ryan as a "Hope." Has shown little and been beaten several times. On January 23 managed to knock out Jeff Madden in four rounds at New Bedford. ONE MORE HOPELESS.

WILLIAM WARREN BARBOUR—Winner of the amateur heavyweight title and picked by Jim Corbett as a real "Hope." Is son of millionaire, and papa says he can never fight as a professional. THAT KOBS HIM OF HOPE.

MISSOURI TO REVISE HORSE RACING

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 3.—A bill to revise horse racing has been introduced in both houses of the Legislature. Michael J. Casey of Kansas City, introduced the Senate bill and Grant Gillespie the House bill. The proposed law provides for creating a State racing regulation committee to supervise a corporation conducting the sport, regulate betting, fix penalties for violations of law and authorize two race meetings annually of not more than twenty days in any city of 50,000 population. Betting will be conducted under the Parimutuel system, 10 per cent of gate receipts to become part of the good roads fund.

CYCLONE KNIGHT DOES NOT LIVE UP TO NAME

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The ten-round bout between Johnny Marto of New York and Phil Knight, the "Kansas City Cyclone," at the National Sporting Club of America, was tame throughout. Marto did all the work, and the "cyclone" covered up in every round except the eighth, when he rushed Marto. The latter plowed both Knight's eyes by the end of the bout.

AL KAUFMAN AFTER TITLE, NOT MONEY

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 3.—Al Kaufman in a statement here to-day said he would not take the public in any six-round bout with Johnson, but would willingly meet him any time in a long-distance contest. Kaufman says he is ready to post money to bind the match.

"I want the title," he said. "On the level, I don't want the money."

BROOKS BUYS COLTS.

James I. Brooks, president of the Feltaway Driving Club, has acquired two standsome colts by Border Knight, 2:32¼, from the Hingham Stock Farm. The pair are coming three-year-olds, and Jim feels that he has two fine trotting prospects.

FEW SHIFTS IN GRIDIRON RULES

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The intercollegiate football rules committee meets at the Hotel Cumberland to-day to discuss the playing rules for the coming season.

Few changes will be made in the present code. It is very unlikely that the football legislators will tamper with the game as a whole. Whatever changes are made as a result of the conference will be merely minor ones.

The board had a hard task of it last year revising the rules to make the game safe, and the results obtained during the last season were satisfactory enough to most of the critics of the gridiron game, so that the policy this year is likely to be one of "let well enough alone."

While there is no doubt that the forward pass will again be a part of the game, there have been some good suggestions for modifying it, or at least for surrounding the play with rules that will be more simple than those used in 1910.

Many of the coaches of the teams at the larger universities do not approve of the forward pass. This was shown by its infrequent use in the larger games last Fall. They refused to encourage it because it was not a specialization whether it could be played successfully. In a few cases it did work according to schedule, but in most instances it failed completely.

The forward pass has strong enemies, and their influence may be felt at the meeting. Harvard led the forward pass contingent at last year's meeting and won by a small vote.

Yale is opposed to the forward pass. Both Walter Camp and Captain Daly are opposed to this play, and most of the Yale team believe that this feature is distinctly opposed to the principles of Rugby. It is felt that the only possible excuse for its existence is found in the fact that it has become identified in popular opinion with the crowded game.

It is also understood that Yale is in favor of strengthening the offense so that it will be possible to score more often. At present Yale regards the possibility of carrying the ball over the line as a matter of a more gambling chance. It is known that Walter Camp favors a modification in this respect.

EAST BOSTON BOXER TO MEET TONY ROSS

Andy Morris, the East Boston heavyweight who is matched to meet Joe Thomas in Portland to-morrow night, to-day agreed to meet Tony Ross or George Cotton at one of the Northern A. C. shows given every Saturday night in Old City Hall, Pittsburg, by Roy Schooley. The distance is six rounds, but the date has not been set. It is very likely that Ross will be selected to meet Morris. He defeated George Cotton a few nights ago and is a big drawing card in the Smoky City.

Morris left here to-day for Portland, as he and Joe Thomas will mix matters there in the Auditorium to-morrow night. Thomas is now training here, and is putting in the finishing touches to his condition at the Portland A. C.

VANDERBILT ELEVEN MAY MEET HARVARD

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Graduate Manager of Athletics Garretson of Harvard and Dr. W. L. Dudley of Vanderbilt will very likely get together at to-day's meeting of the football rules committee and arrange a football game for November 11, the date left vacant on the Harvard schedule by Cornell's refusal to come to Cambridge a third time.

CROP OF 'HOPES' BIG FAILURE

What has happened to that luxuriant crop of "white hopes" that bloomed last July 5, the day after Colored Jack Johnson made White Jim Jeffries realize that farming was his trade?

Like a bunch of mushrooms "white hopes" sprung up overnight when the announcement came from Reno that Johnson had successfully defended his title against the white giant. Again, like mushrooms, most of the "white hopes" were quickly picked.

But three big white men of any account are left to-day of the score or more that were ready to take up the white man's burden on July 5. These are Al Kaufman, Carl Morris and Jack Lester.

That Kaufman is ever liable to give Johnson serious trouble in a fight is not shown by anything in his record.

About Morris little is known. He may be the next white champion, for accounts of his fights to date say that he can an awful punch—he has won every fight with a knockout—and that he is wonderfully fast, as fast as Johnson, some experts declare.

Less is known of Lester. Tommy Burns is sponsor for this young man, and says he is sure to make good.

The hopes that have gone into the discard, as far as ever being considered as anything but "meat" for Johnson, are Jim Stewart, Bill Lang, Bombardier Wells, Mr. William Warren Barbour (the amateur), Bill Squires, Gunboat Smith, Con O'Kelly, Ian Hague, Thomas Edward Casey (the Villa Nova College youth), Jack Jones (giant millworker of Western Pennsylvania), Big Al Terry (able seaman in Uncle Sam's navy), Al Benedict, Walter Monohan and Major Roderick Mackenzie, who challenged to boost a stunt he was doing on the stage about that time.

There are others who also achieved brief fame by having their pictures and payroll proportions printed in their home papers, but the above list is enough to satisfy almost any one.

Letters of a Bride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Parting of the Ways

DEAREST MUMSIE:

It is [illegible] and Bobby and I are engaged with more than [illegible] Bobby wants me to marry him right away, because of me. I cannot stand it to be away from him longer, Mumsie. I cannot.

I [illegible] go with Bobby when I came in from [illegible] Dickson, the chauffeur, must have been waiting into the street somewhere. Nobody [illegible] and they headed for [illegible] something way that I [illegible] breathe.

Mumsie, I control my voice enough to [illegible] were going to [illegible] me. But [illegible] giver [illegible] ing to [illegible] his fingers [illegible] ing rosily, would be neat for mine. He has [illegible] spoken to me about the night of [illegible] Beach manor.

That Kiss of Sinclair's

What have I done Mumsie that I should be treated like this? I kissed Sinclair (and I have a reason, as Mr. Sinclair says, as I did that night after all the other silly thing that happened, and was his kissing me that day, and Bobby does not know about that, I never could find the courage to tell him. I wish I had out [illegible] too late now.

Sometimes he looks at me in such a strange way and, as he took my face between his hands and said "Peggy, never give me cause to doubt you, I would kill the man who ever brought a shadow of grief into those dear eyes."

I felt my face grow scarlet, Mumsie, and I [illegible] a word to say. He looked straight into my eyes and said again, "You are his own true Peggy, aren't you, girl?"

I put my arms around his neck and said "Oh, Bobby, I love you so, never stop loving me. I should die if you did."

And Mumsie, it was the very next day that he begged me to [illegible]. What does it mean?

Longing for Mumsie's Advice

Can I come to you for a while? I need your advice as to what I should do.

I feel that Bobby is not treating me fairly. He has been giving a good deal of Mrs Beatty lately. You see, we are always invited to the same houses and every hostess gets the most [illegible] after at dinner in the most natural way.

Bobby dined in town last night, and I did not see him before he left this morning.

I had a splitting headache and stayed in bed.

When I heard the car come around, I crept to the window and watched Bobby drive off. He looked so big and handsome, Mumsie, and I love him so.

I went back to bed and cried myself sick.

"You Always Know What to Do"

I am in bed now, and I would give the world if you were here, you are the only one in the world who could comfort me or you always know what is best.

Write and tell me what to do; I will do just as you say.

I want to be happy, Mumsie. Perhaps I have been foolish; but I do love Bobby with all my soul. Good-by, my dearest.

Yours forever, PEGGY.

Tricks of the Shopper

How One Woman Gets Her Pocket Money

It was at the leather goods department of a large store. Mrs. Martin had brought back an expensive silver-mounted card case.

The clerk had just taken it from its wrappings. He examined it critically and then drew out his refund check book. He wrote down her name, address and the price paid for the card case—$7.50.

"Was this charged or paid for?" he asked.

"Oh, I paid for it," she answered quickly. He scrawled "paid" on the check, and then called the floorwalker to sign it.

"The lady wishes to return this card case," the clerk explained.

The floorwalker glanced casually at the card case, then at the lady, signed the check and strolled off in the leisurely, lordly way that floorwalkers have.

Then the clerk called a boy and sent the check and the card case to the wrapping desk. In a few moments the boy returned with a refund slip for $7.50, properly stamped.

It was the money Mrs. Martin wanted, so she hurried over to the notion counter, bought the first thing she saw—a 25-cent needlebook—and gave the slip of $7.50 in payment. She received in return the needlebook and $7.25 in cash. She put the money in her purse and left the store with a beaming face.

Now, this was not wholly a dishonest performance. Mrs. Martin had bought the card case there a few days before. And she had not carried it, or had it copied, or used it for any purpose whatsoever. In fact, it had not been out of the box since she bought it. And yet she had bought it with the sole purpose of returning it. Her object had been to get the $7 in cash.

WHEN SHE BOUGHT THE CARD CASE SHE HAD IT CHARGED. WHEN SHE RETURNED IT SHE CLAIMED THAT SHE HAD PAID CASH. And this is how Mrs. Martin gets most of her pocket money.

Her husband is a well-to-do lawyer and allows her to have accounts at several large stores. He pays these by check the first of every month, and rarely grumbles at the amounts or scrutinizes the items. He feels that as long as his wife spends money for clothes and for the house it is all right. But he gives her very little pocket money. He says that women should not be entrusted with money. And this is his method of keeping track of his wife's expenditures.

And so Mrs. Martin resorts to the strategy of buying things and having them charged, then taking them back and getting the cash.

Of course she uses discretion. She varies her purchases and the departments from which they are bought. She runs no risk, except the risk of not getting the money. For should they remember that the article had been charged and she only to pay that she thought she paid cash, but perhaps she was mistaken. And they would simply deduct it from her monthly bill. She would be no worse off than she was before.

This is a strategy hardly to be commended. And yet, a big department store manager assures me it is one that is practiced by many women.

The Bill Clerk

By KENNETT HARRIS.

"It's funny about girls," ruminated the bill clerk. "Darned funny."

"That's a sage reflection, young," said the cashier. "But you will allow me to point out that, sometimes, it isn't so darned funny."

"You're right at that," agreed the bill clerk.

"I've made 'em a kind of a study," he continued. "I've read up on 'em and attended lectures on 'em by various sniffs that claimed to be experts. I've heard our pinhead on 'em."

"I beg your pardon," corrected the cashier. "I never fell an epileptic fit and impersonate, and what you would call sputter, but never anything like it. I would are felt justified in hitting on."

"Let it go at that." The bill clerk conceded. "The point is that I haven't met a girl yet that came across one article a mile of the speculations on 'em in the whole library or on the news stand. That's why my yearning is fated to remain unsatisfied and I'm going to lead a lonely life without any individual hearthstone or the soft, clinging, sticky touch of baby fingers."

"This is a sad, sad hearing," commented the cashier. "But to use a homely, yet ably, expression, you mustn't expect too much sugar for a cent, my dear boy."

The Maid of Fiction

"It isn't that," said the bill clerk. "I'm so hog. I don't hold out for a flawless and queenly beauty with an intellect equal to my own and a soul like a pot of matching. Not by any means. And I'm willing to allow a liberal discount on the maids of fiction. There's a lot about her that isn't mentioned that's so, just the same. You know that, and I know it. But she foots up all right, no?"

"Doesn't the real girl make a pretty respectable sum total?" asked the cashier.

"No, sir, she's shy on the balance," said the bill clerk. "I'm not saying she hasn't got her points. She may be a cooker and have a sweet disposition; she may be smart as a whip and kind to her old mother; she may be able to knock the daylights out of Chopin sonatas and have a voice like the sighing of the summer breeze, but that's about as far as it goes."

They Have Their Faults, Too

"You don't seem to understand," complained the bill clerk. "All the girls in the stories aint perfection. Some of 'em are skinny and some of them are sallow. I've known 'em to have big mouths and turnup noses. Of course, they've got to have somebody to be set off to advantage—a wealth of chestnut hair or glorious eyes that redeemed the plainness of their features, or a subtle witchery or a sparkling way of getting back at a fellow, but they have their faults just the same. And, as I said, they've got some little drawbacks that aren't billed. They're getting so they stack up about even with the flesh and blood article to that extent."

"Then what are you kicking about?" demanded the cashier.

"Here's the point," said the bill clerk. "In fiction the girl always has enough sense to pick the right boy out of the bunch. She may be fooled for a few chapters by the brilliant, showy, specious skate, but at the finish her wealth of chestnut hair goes to the shirt bosom of the genuine article. Every time."

"I see," said the cashier, rubbing his chin thoughtfully. "I see."

"It's a pipe," said the bill clerk. "When it comes to a show-down, you see that she's pulled in the right card, no matter how it showed at her. Now that's where the real girl tumbles down. You give her a choice between a boy with a big bank roll and some knock-kneed, pin-headed, mush-mouthed, thick-eared, freckled boy with a pink-striped shirt and she'll fall for the boy every time."

"Too bad!" sighed the cashier. "Too bad! Seems you can never do love real luck every once in awhile. But, buck up! Ever hear of the lonely maiden lady who heard and try again. There's as good fish in the sea as ever—"

"You chump!" growled the bill clerk. "Who's talking about me? Do you think I'm a man make a few general observations?"

CHAPTER XXV.

"While the Lamp Holds Out to Burn——"

WHEN Florlot and Raymond passed out of the little room, the former dropped heavily into one of the big empire armchairs on the hall, where the judges had sat a short time before. Raymond gazed at him anxiously. His face was buried in his hands and he made no sound.

"What's the matter father?" asked the young man, going to and on the quivering shoulder. For a moment Florlot did not speak. He was trying to nerve himself up to meet a crisis that he had dreaded for years. The time for delay was past. He believed that Jacqueline would live only a few hours and he dared not tell Raymond's mother die and have him learn afterward that he had been made no one chance to speak to her and know. He felt that Raymond might possibly forgive anything but that.

With an effort he raised his haggard eyes to his son's and took the boy's hand in his.

"My boy," he said, his voice hoarse and trembling with emotion, "I must tell you something unbelievably terrible. I know—how you have loved me and looked up to me. I am not worthy of it and what do you when you've heard what I must tell you——"You will, father cried Raymond, "my father!"

"Father!" cried the boy in horror, throwing his arms around his neck. "Father! What——"

But Florlot gently pushed him away and silenced him with a gesture.

"Your mother—is not dead," he faltered. The words struck the color from Raymond's face and he sank into a chair, staring at his father with terrified eyes.

"Not dead" he repeated in a dull whisper. "I never knew—she lived——"

"When you were hardly a year old she left me," he said. "The boy stared for a moment with a cry that was something between a choke and a sob.

"Wait!" commanded his father, hoarsely. "It was my fault. I didn't know her. I didn't understand her. My neglect drove her to it. She went off with a lover!"

Raymond pressed his hands to his face and crouched against the broad desk. If the boy had physically crushed him. But there is worse than that" continued Florlot, rising. "She came back to me and begged for forgiveness. She grovelled at my feet and pleaded for mercy. She said she was still a slave of her fascination."

"And I couldn't go without thanking you" he said. She smiled into his face, but there was still a trace of alarm in her eyes.

"Thanking me?" she repeated.

Of course!" replied Raymond. "Why I owe my first success to you! To-day has brought me the greatest joy of my life!"

"But if you thank me, what can I say to you?" she asked, her voice trembling with tenderness. He smiled back at her.

"Tell me that you are glad," he suggested. She gazed into his eyes with her heart in hers.

Felt His Lips Tremble

"Yes, I am glad—very glad—almost happy!" she said, in a low, vibrant voice. "But I did not dare hope for the happiness that has come to me to-day!"

Her strength did, indeed, seem to be returned rapidly. Her voice was surer, her eyes sparkled, and there was a fleck of color in her cheeks. Raymond felt his lips tremble and he fought with a desire to throw himself into her arms. It was several seconds before he trusted himself to speak. Then:

"I hope I won't tire you," he said, politely. "Before I go, don't you think we might have a little chat? You haven't spoiled me much in that respect, have you?" he added, with a sudden smile.

"You are my first client and I hardly know you."

She reached out and touched his arm in quick apology.

"You must forgive me for having received you so rudely," she said. Raymond laughed.

"You didn't receive me at all, as a matter of fact," he declared. "But I wasn't angry. I said to myself, 'She probably finds me too young,' or has no confidence in me, or——"

His voice dropped and in a lower tone she added, "or she doesn't think—she would like me."

He felt a sudden, almost painful pressure on his arm.

"Ah! Don't think that!" she pleaded, quickly.

"But I was so sad—so despairingly sad!"

Raymond raised his eyes to her face.

"And now?" he half whispered.

"And now—thanks to you!—I am almost happy!"

"It makes me happy to hear you say so! Do you know," he went on, blithely, as he put a chair in a confidential manner, "I felt the deepest sympathy for you from the first!"

"Really?" she smiled.

"Yes," he declared, with an energetic nod. "From the start; for I was sure you were unhappy, and since still that you should not have been unhappy. I wanted to console you—to tell you to pluck up your courage—to convince you that I was not only your counsel but your friend—a true and sincere friend."

"If I had only known—if I had only known!" murmured the woman, with a sharp catch in her voice. It cost Raymond an effort to continue in his bright, boyish tones, but he succeeded.

"I made myself a promise that I would win your case for you," he went on; "that I would work it out with all my might. As you wouldn't give my your secret, I made up my mind I would guess it, and you see—I succeeded! I made the truth clear, and every heart in the court felt for you. Now you are free—free to go to the son you love so dearly! Promise me," his voice trembled, "promise me that you will not forget me altogether!"

Her eyes were misty with tears and her face quivered.

"Forget you! Forget you!" she cried, brokenly.

Raymond turned his face away.

Struggled to Feet

"I know I shall always remember you!" he said in a low voice, as one making a sacred vow.

With a half-cry, half-sob she struggled to her feet. He had promised to spare her the pain of knowing that he knew her to be a mother, but even that failed before the agony of feeling his presence within reach of her hands and knowing that she must never clasp him to her heart.

"I must go—I must go away!" she panted, feverishly. But before Raymond could rise her weakened limbs had collapsed and she sank back into her chair.

"And I cannot!" she moaned, her hands pressed to her eyes.

"Please don't go!" he pleaded, laying his hand lightly on her arm. At the touch of his fingers she straightened up with a gasp.

"Before you go," she said, in a piteous half-whisper, "I should like to give you some little trifle as a keepsake, but I have absolutely nothing. But you can be sure that as long as I live—as long—as my heart beats and—my breath lasts—I will never forget you!"

An impulse that he could not resist moved Raymond to reach out and take her in his arms.

"Give me your hand!" he said. His voice quivered and the woman could feel the trial just now." he went on unsteadily as his slender hand towards her. "When I turned toward you, you took my hand and pressed it? I—I could feel your eyes—to and into my heart! I—I wanted them—to take you in my arms—and press you to my heart!"

His wild eyes closed and her body was rigid and tense.

"Will you—won't you—won't you kiss me—mother?" The words pushed out in a sob as he slid from the chair to his knees by her side. With a cry that was more than human and strength that was more than a man's, she flung her arms around his neck, crushed his dark head to her breast and rained kisses on his eyes and hair and lips and brow.

"Oh, my Raymond! My darling! My darling boy!" she sobbed again and again, and his face was wet with her tears. * * *

"It is too much! Ah, God! I can't stand this joy! My Raymond! My little laddie!"

Minute after minute passed and there was no sound but Jacqueline's quick breathing.

"Are you in pain?" he murmured tenderly, trying to lift his head. He could feel against his breast the tumultuous beating of her heart suddenly die away to an unsteady flutter.

"No, no, dear!" she whispered, faintly. "Don't go! Don't move! How—did you know——"

"Father just told me, mother mine!" he replied, softly, nestling his head into the hollow of her neck. He had not felt for twenty-three years. "He told me all that you had suffered. But it is over now. We'll forget those long years of separation—together!"

Her body was a long, delicious hug and a dozen soft kisses. There was another silence. Then Raymond spoke, a little timidly:

"Father—my father is waiting, mother. Won't you see him?"

She smiled down into his upturned face, but there was a strange dimness in her eyes and his voice sounded far away.

"Yes, yes!" came in a faint whisper. "Tell him—to come—quickly!"

He gave her a long kiss, sprang up and ran out into the courtroom. She half rose and pressed a hand over her heart for the glass of medicine, but could not reach it. Then she tried to call, but her lips barely framed the name. Florlot was between the door of the witness room and a man before her eyes that might have been the ghost of the man she had known in the [illegible] long years ago.

Raymond ran in, closely followed by the three old men.

"Hurry, father! She is waiting!"

He stopped, startled by the position of the still figure in the chair wiped the perspiration from his face. Florlot advanced quickly, touched the limp hand and stepped back with terrible cry.

"Mother! Mother!"

In a little churchyard in the valley of Vienne, not far from the birthplace of the blessed Bernadette, is a slender column of white marble marked with the name of "Cecile" in large letters. Beneath is an inscription which begins:

"Here lies the body of Jacqueline Claire Gilberte Lefevre, the beloved mother of Raymond——"

"Madame X" had found in death what she had lost in life—love and a name.

But if Desmond thinks he can get by with this stunt without anybody seeing him, he is no end mistaken. Those painters out on the scaffold are not so intent on their work that they haven't got time to make a note of the window once in a while. The Neck to the Yoke

By WINIFRED BLACK

HERE'S a letter from a "happy wife." I suppose they would list her that way in the census books, don't you?

Married eighteen years, the mother of seven children, and she has never been thirty-five miles from home in eighteen years.

Husband? Oh, yes; husband goes as far as 125 miles whenever he feels like it.

So do the boys. But husband always has so much business on hand that he doesn't want to take his wife, and the boys hate to be bothered with a woman hanging on to their coats. So year in and year out, Summer and Winter, in falling rain and in streaming sunshine, in sickness and in health, for better and for worse, mother stays at home and does the work.

Husband is a good man; there has never been a scandal about him of any sort. He's a prosperous farmer, and he bought a piano for daughter and a buggy or two for wheels for the sons. He pays his debts; he doesn't drink a drop, and all the neighbors tell his wife wherever they see her, which is about once in six months, that her husband fairly idolizes her.

Mother Never Goes

But he won't take her anywhere. Every night he harnesses up and goes down to the corner store or over to the village to a church entertainment or down to the next farm for an hour or so. The children's noise makes him nervous, he says.

Mother never goes—seems one has to stay at home with the children and the cat, and, of course, it's mother.

And now mother is so tired of it that she has written me a letter and told me that the minute the three-year-old is big enough to take care of himself she's going to run away to town, where she can "see folks," and she's never, never going back home again.

Poor mother! Of course, she'll never run away from home—she'll be too tired and too broken spirited to do anything but creep by the time that three-year-old is big enough to leave. And if she did run away she'd die of homesickness in a week. So grown the neck accustomed to the yoke.

And look here, little unconscious mother, you write a letter that would melt a heart of stone. You say your husband is a good man—why don't you write that letter to him? Tell him just exactly how you feel; put it in the mail box down at the gate. Take the baby and go over to the next farm, for the day. Say at the end of your letter where you've gone, and tell your husband that you want him to sit down and think it all over carefully before he makes up his mind about you and your troubles.

Must Write Message

No, talking won't do it. You've talked the thing over a hundred times by now, unless you're different from any other woman I ever saw, and husband just let your words go in one ear and out of the other, and said, good naturedly, "Mother is in a tantrum again." No, you must write your message.

Then go over to the neighbors and wait, and if he's anything like the man you say he is he'll come after you in the red wheeled buggy, and on the way home he'll tell you all about the little trip he's planning for you and for him. And on the very next day you'll start on that trip and let the older children take care of themselves—and the cat—for once. It won't hurt them a bit, and it will save their mother to them.

Try the letter, sister; try the letter. I believe it will work.

Dolly's Hat

By KENNETT HARRIS

TRYING on some hats is Dolly.
Seems to be the merest folly.
La Modiste seems melancholy
And she's not to blame.
Next and trim, or big and shady,
Any kind, or shape, of cady
Seems to suit the little lady
Just about the same.

Lying on the littered table,
Each one with its Paris label,
Brown and crimson, green and sable,
Perked and round and flat,
Trimmed with ribbon and with feather,
Chiffon, satin, both together,
What, pray, does it matter whether
Which is Dolly's hat?

Though, in squattiness, it cowered,
Though triumphantly it towered,
Though with violets embowered,
As may be the case,
I've no trouble in deciding,
Any one's the best, providing,
That it's one that isn't hiding
Dolly's pretty face.

What Is Life Without Gossip?

By DOROTHY DIX

In Germany, where everything that you have a human impulse to do is "verboten," the burgomaster of a small town has undertaken to stop women from talking so much. Gossip is given the "double cross," as it were, and dire penalties are to be inflicted on those ladies who are given to discussing their neighbors' affairs.

The worthy burgomaster believes that the strict enforcement of this law will bring about a reign of peace and sweetness and light in which the newsgatherer shall cease from troubling, and women's tongues will be at rest. It is to inaugurate a sort of earthly millennium in which your dearest friend will not publish to the world the secret you have told her in strictest confidence, and in which you may be the first one to leave an afternoon tea party without the dread certainty that you are having your character behind you.

If the law against gossip could be enforced—which, thank Heaven, it never can—what a good little place that German village would be, and how intolerably dull! How safe it would be to live there except for the danger of yawning one's self to death! How elevating the conversation, where one might discuss nothing but Shakespeare and the musical glasses, and how tedious!

The Very Life of Intercourse

For gossip in the very atmosphere of social intercourse. Take that away and all talk expires of inanition. If Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. cannot discuss Mrs. C.'s little peculiarities when they meet, what interest have they in meeting? It's the exchange of personalities that makes the world go round. Otherwise, we could each live, shut up in our separate spheres, as calm, self-contained, emotionless and as unfeeling as an oyster in a shell.

The truth is that instead of being abhorred, gossip is a thing to be encouraged and promoted. Not scandal mongering of course, though there is no more effective police force in the world than "they say." The fear of our neighbors' tongues is the beginning of virtue with the majority of us, and many a man who walks down a straight and narrow path, and many a woman who is a model wife and mother would do a deal of sidestepping if they could be perfectly assured that they wouldn't be talked about.

Not all gossip, however, is malicious. Most of it is just a kindly human interest in one's neighbors' little sorrows and joys, and it is the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin. It is the outward expression of a kind heart, a generous mind and a catholic sympathy.

In Touch With Humanity

Show me the woman who collects news as irresistibly as a magnet picks up tool and nails, who knows what the people next door have for breakfast; and how often; the hour of the girl across the street comes home from her; and when Mrs. Brown and husband beats her; and what Mrs. Brown said to Mr. Brown when Mr. B stayed out until 3 o'clock at the lodge, and I will show you a good, kind woman who is always ready to sit up with the sick, to give to the poor, and to mingle her tears with those who are in affliction.

She belongs to the great sisterhood and brotherhood of life, and she is interested in other people's affairs just because her heart is beating in tune with theirs.

Show me a woman who never gossips, who never knows the people next door to her even by name, who never inquires who is dead when she sees the white crepe flutering from the house across the street, who never knows why her servants go about with smiling faces or tear-swollen eyes, and I will show you a woman whose selfishness and egotism are steel lined and copper riveted.

She is a woman without sympathy, without heart, without generosity, without emotion—a woman who does not care a rap what happens to the balance of the world so long as things go well with herself.

Robert Louis Stevenson put being a good gossip at the head of the desirable qualities that a man should look for in picking out a wife, and he wasn't asking it in doing so.

There are no women such agreeable companions as these sprightly ladies who, during the day, accumulate an interesting budget of harmless news that they vivaciously retail over the dinner table.

Fancy Her Suppressed!

Fancy these delightful gossips being suppressed and having to sit up and gorge themselves food in silence, or else listen while Madam discoursed upon the philosophy of Nietzsche or the symbolism of Maeterlinck, or of being treated upon the details of the flirtation of the widow with the prosperous bachelor, and the inner details of the spat between Mr. and Mrs. Smithkins! Why, every man would make a practice of despising women's tattle, will give long approval to the law suppressing it; but people will tear continuing that the masculine abhorrence of gossip is only a pose, and that her husband never reproves her for talking about her neighbors until after she has told him the last word of her story.

It would indeed, be a sad and dreary day should the burgomaster's law, suppressing gossip be generally enforced. We should all have each other to entertaining from the only subject of perpetual interest that never flags is just our neighbors.

When Lige Got Up and Got

By KENNETT HARRIS

"THEY had the gol'mer there with the rest of the fugitives," Dickey Bowffield informed the store circle at Ash Flat. "He's slick, is the gov'mer," he added admiringly. "There was a passel of women folks out, and the way he softsoaped 'em out'n beat all. 'It's the juices what keeps us from bein' the scourges we ruthlessly would be without 'em,' he says. They're our guidin' stars, says he. Whatever I am to-day, I owe to my wife,' he allows.

"Well ought to have give the rattlesnake credit for it, commented old Man Somerbody.

"Tain't fair to blame it all on to her."

"Just the same, the women folks seem to have a hand to do with gittin' an' directin' us," contended Solomon Baker. "I reckon the most of us married men air like a eight-day clock if it wasn't for our wives. They 'ame stimulate a feller.'

"Ain' they don't want him to have no other stimulants," said Washington Hancock. "Still, I reckon it's all for the best. Sometimes they keep the gal a-goin' more than's strictly nessity, but 'tain't often there was Lige Dickens' case. I'll say that what I assumed to much afore a woman got a hold of him an' put him on the straight an' narrer. Only time I ever seen a woman make a success of despisin' women's tattle, will give long approval to the law suppressing it; but people will tear continuing that the masculine abhorrence of gossip is only a pose, and that her husband never reproves her for talking about her neighbors until after she has told him the last word of her story.

It would indeed, be a sad and dreary day should the burgomaster's law, suppressing gossip be generally enforced. We should all have each other to entertaining from the only subject of perpetual interest that never flags is just our neighbors.

Lige Took Things as They Came

"Lige bilieved in takin' things as they come. If they didn't come, he wasn't goin' to put himself out chasin' after 'em if he could help it. Not once in a hundred could he. He wasn't one of those persons that's always a-lookin' for trouble, an' healthy an' gits up an appetite. Plenty was Lige's idee of eternal pertinge.

"Thar he took a notion that he wanted Jim Carson a gal. Mella Ann, I don't reckon that he'd ever have got out of private comin' after Mella Ann's dad, but for kind of easy an' that suited him. Another thing, she was right ambitious about her home, an' Lige liked to see folks ambitious. He'd set a watchin' you work by the hour if you was a-workin' at the pertickler place to set an he allowed there wouldn't be no trouble about that.

"An' how dead again! Lige could'nt take no hurry. Some he said he didn't have no all-up-an-git about him, but Mella Ann allowed she'd tend to that part of it.

"'You calm it, says Old Jim. 'It's in his bones,' he says to me, 'an' a feller has it in his bones, it's thar to stay.'

Mella Ann Was a Driver

"'I'll tend to his bones,' says Mella Ann. An she certainly did. There wasn't a bone in Lige's body that didn't ache like a tooth the pore she drove him. She kept his legs moves stirrin' around from the time he got up in the mornin' an' his back bone wasn't got much more rest than her jaw bone. Folks was feelin' sorry when I tell you that she used to patch the knees of his pants with a tow sack with the seats of his old ones right along.

"But all the same, after Lige got hooked again ready to buckle in. Allowed that he couldn't get the habits of hustlin' around. As long as she was behind him, an' I reckon she had, he'd make things hum; but he wouldn't git a move on hisself. Just stood still an' plumb stagnated with him. I wish I'd married a man with a little more git up to him, an' not a right good start on wasn't have to do it. Then there isn't no harm in settin' round for a spell shinglin' the barn roof or cookin' up a mess of fish.

"I've got nothin' to look forward to, anyway, do I?"

"What's that?" says she.

What Lige Looked Forward To

"'The cilentery,' says Lige. 'I won't be long now afore I'm plum wore out an' laid away in the cilentery, an' I reckon I'll finally see my finish.' I reckon I can count on a good two or three years of rest after you begin to worry about the words Lige's agreein' on top of me.

"Well, there was one thing about it; There wasn't a better kep, better payin' farm in the county than Lige's. He put the bank account ground an' ground. Folks allowed that Lige Dickens was a right good prof ited feller all; but she wasn't satisfied. Allowed that she'd never got all of him that I hadn't no time to do justice by my self, an' that I was a-goin' to the neighbors that was a-trackin' Lige down. Lige is a right good man to some respects, but he ain't got no gift of gab to him.

"That's the way the kid acts," commented the chairman, a trifle excited. "Can't no wonder he was alongin' for the silent treatment. Reckon I'd be, if he wasn't long a-gittin' there."

"I dunno," replied Hancock. "I'll say I know he may be alive yit. He did appear to."

"Shh!" exclaimed Baker.

"Yes," said Dickey Bowffield. "One morning Mella Ann woke up an' he was dead. She hunted high an' low for him. She looked under the bed—"

"He wasn't there, was he?" interrupted the chairman, with a groan.

"No," replied Hancock, "he wasn't there. There was a note on the table, though, from him, but there was a settin' room full of folks, an' I reckon you'll excuse me if I don't say what it said. I'm not willin' to look forward to no more. I've done got upon my last night! I played the game and lost! Are you going to rob me of the last chance to pay my debts? I owe it to you—I owe it to myself—to square this last account," he went on more calmly. "I owe it to you that my life has been a failure. The excitement of making money has warped everything else in me!" He paused a moment and then went on in a low voice, as if to himself:

"My life has been a failure—this will make it a success. I don't want to pose as a martyr or any sort of tool; but, but I feel you into this mess, and it's up to me to find you out!" The feverish excitement again shook his shoulders. "Act like men, not children!"

His father rose, both hands extended appealingly.

"Gentlemen!—gentlemen!" he cried, with a breaking voice. "I—am his father! I appeal to you! I don't ask him to—"

"Ah, now, father!" exclaimed the young man, his voice softened with tenderness, as he threw an arm around the old man's shoulders and gently turned him into a chair. "Don't, please! There's no need for that. Then he turned and, as he patted him reassuringly on the back: "It is my—my fault!" his father at once whirled and, inherited your gambling instincts from me!"

"Now, nonsense!" laughed his son. "You know better than that! Why, I'm all the real inward trutht—broke if you really knew exactly what you were doing! I was not myself. Don't realize!"

"That's true!" sputtered Raymond, eagerly.

"Yes—yes!" came in a whisper from Cowper's white lips.

"I Played and Lost"

"I know—but it seems a horrible thing to do!" protested Tooker. "Deliberately to accuse you—our own business associate!"

"I can't do it!" And old Mr. Emerson dropped into a chair.

"Nor I!" added Tooker, firmly.

"Good God! What's the matter with you all?" ripped Emerson, angrily. "You agreed to my plan! You—you—I—I think no! You!" stammered the traitor.

"Have you thought of a plan to—to—" began Raymond in a dry, uncertain voice, "by hazel?" was the prompt response. "Oh, last night's experience was not enough? Must something more be contributed to appear before the Magistrate this morning?" He entered into a conversation with a little police court lawyer with a Russian accent—who wanted to defend me for $10. I put the whole case up to him as a hypothetical case. Inside of ten minutes that little man had solved the whole question!" he declared enthusiastically. "It's simple. I wonder I didn't think of it myself!"

"Let's have it," said Tooker, tersely.

"You four men," Emerson explained, "must apply for a warrant for my arrest. You must arraign me of making misuse of your notes. You gave them to me to raise money, and, unknown to you, I borrowed our own funds. In my father's case that is an absolute fact."

There was a silence of a few moments. Then said Raymond in omni-scrutable tones, full of relief:

"That's all right!"

"Let's have it," nodded Cowper, nervously, "I think so."

"I don't quite see," objected Tooker, shaking his head, "it doesn't seem right for us to accuse you."

"Why not?" demanded Harmon, angrily. "I draw the line at making an accusation against you," declared Lyckel firmly. And old Mr. Emerson found his voice at last.

"I refuse absolutely!"

The young men smiled a little.

"I expected opposition from you, father, but—"

"If you are to be punished, let the proper authorities do it," interrupted the old man.

"It's not a question of my punishment," explained his son, patiently; "but of righting the punishment from you. And it's the real inward trutht—broke of you really knew exactly what you were doing! I was not myself. Don't realize!"

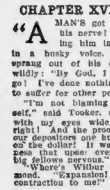
"A MAN'S got to drink to keep up his nerve! A prison cell—starting him in the face!" he said in a husky voice. Then he suddenly sprang out of his chair and broke out wildly: "By God, I won't go! I won't go! I've done nothing and I'm not going to suffer for other people's ambitions—"

"I'm not blaming anyone—except myself," said Tooker, quietly. "I went in with my eyes wide open. Wilbur's all right! And the proof is that we can buy our depositors one hundred and fifty cents on the dollar! It was the expansion business that upset everything. It got the big fellows nervous."

"Where's Wilbur now?" insisted Raymond. "Expansion! It looks more like contraction to me!"



"Get them!" he exclaimed. "How?"

"—I don't know!"

"Rubbish!" exclaimed Toker, turning away contemptuously.

"Quit it! Get yer head drinking that stuff!" snapped Raymond, watching Cowper intuitively pouring whisky into himself. "There was a silence of several moments, and even Tooker showed signs of growing uneasiness.

"Bottle's empty. No news is good news!" said old Mr. Emerson at last. His tones were almost cheery. "We shall come out all right, I feel sure! Wilbur's motives were good, and it's the motives that count."

"That's what I told Darwin!" cried Cowper. Between terror and whiskey he had thrown caution to the winds. "He says it doesn't make a d—— bit of difference about motives! The law is the law!"

Tooker raised a deprecating hand.

"It's all right, gentlemen," he said quietly. "If we'd succeeded we'd patted ourselves on the back and congratulated great business men. But we failed—and we're all trying to blame the other fellow!"

"A Charge of Burglary"

"Pissot! Please!" broke in old Mr. Emerson before the others could reply. "I am not justifying my son! But I do believe that the boy was honest in his intentions and was driven to it by the unfair methods of our competitors."

Raymond snorted and there was a short silence broken by a groan from Cowper.

"I'd give every dollar I have to be out of it! Every dollar! Every——"

The door into Wilbur's apartments quietly opened and he stepped into the room, still in evening clothes and auto coat.

"Good morning, gentlemen!" he said quietly. "I'm late—very sorry! I was detained."

"Detained!" echoed Cowper. Emerson darted a quick glance at him and went on calmly.

"As a matter of fact, I slept last night at the police station—where I had been taken on a charge of burglary."

A chorus of startled exclamations answered him.

"Burglary!" gasped his father.

"The Case Was Dismissed"

"Yes," nodded the young man. "I might have saw a way out of our difficulties and called at Darwin's house to try and arrange the affair. I got nothing for my pains but a most uncomfortable night. This morning Mrs. Darwin believed to make the charge and the case was dismissed. The Judge thought it was a practical joke.

"Fortunately the newspaper men thought I was arrested for speeding. Now, what must we do next? Where's my boy?" demanded his father.

"Wake you up in the middle of the night? No, dad! I've brought quite enough trouble on you as it is. I just wanted to keep it out of the papers.

"Well, I know the rest. He went on grimly. "Darwin has our notes and a sworn statement of the transaction involving us all!"

CHAPTER XIX.

The Way Out

BUT for the charge of burglary hanging over him Emerson would have gone into court the morning after his attempted theft of the incriminating papers with a light heart. A young lawyer, one of the many who infest the corridors of the Magistrates' courts in the hope of picking up anything from a quarter up, stood the auto cost and evening clothes up as a speculative case and so simple a proposition in exchange for a minor dollar bill. Him Emerson drew into a conversation and got for nothing advice that he would gladly have paid thousands for.

When neither Mr. nor Mrs. Darwin appeared and the Magistrate had dismissed the case with a few caustic remarks to Miss Darwin about the inadvisability of carrying alleged witticisms into his court in the future, Emerson hurried out of the court, called a cab and drove downtown to find his father and partners that they, at least, were safe. Then on getting to his home from the beginning he stead of relieving their minds at once, there was mere comfort in the sight of the faces of three of the four men and anguish in the face of the fourth when he announced that Darwin had the notes and a sworn statement!

"Sworn statement!" echoed Raymond, in a dazed whisper.

"By whom?" demanded Tooker, from the edge of his chair. Cowper, moaning by the others, made an entreating gesture.

"I Have a Plan"

"It will come out later," said the young man, coolly. "In the meantime, if possible, that statement must be contradicted or denied—withdrawn! Eh, Cowper? What do you think? Can it be done?"

"Yes—yes!—I—I think so! Yes!" stammered the traitor.

"Have you thought of a plan to—to—" began Raymond in a dry, uncertain voice, "by hazel?" was the prompt response. "Oh, last night's experience was not enough? Must something more be contributed to appear before the Magistrate this morning?" He entered into a conversation with a little police court lawyer with a Russian accent—who wanted to defend me for $10. I put the whole case up to him as a hypothetical case. Inside of ten minutes that little man had solved the whole question!" he declared enthusiastically. "It's simple. I wonder I didn't think of it myself!"

"Let's have it," said Tooker, tersely.

"You four men," Emerson explained, "must apply for a warrant for my arrest. You must arraign me of making misuse of your notes. You gave them to me to raise money, and, unknown to you, I borrowed our own funds. In my father's case that is an absolute fact."

There was a silence of a few moments. Then said Raymond in omni-scrutable tones, full of relief:

"That's all right!"

"Let's have it," nodded Cowper, nervously, "I think so."

"I don't quite see," objected Tooker, shaking his head, "it doesn't seem right for us to accuse you."

"Why not?" demanded Harmon, angrily. "I draw the line at making an accusation against you," declared Lyckel firmly. And old Mr. Emerson found his voice at last.

"I refuse absolutely!"

The young men smiled a little.

"I expected opposition from you, father, but—"

"If you are to be punished, let the proper authorities do it," interrupted the old man.

"It's not a question of my punishment," explained his son, patiently; "but of righting the punishment from you. And it's the real inward trutht—broke of you really knew exactly what you were doing! I was not myself. Don't realize!"

"That's true!" sputtered Raymond, eagerly.

"Yes—yes!" came in a whisper from Cowper's white lips.

"I played and Lost"

"I know—but it seems a horrible thing to do!" protested Tooker. "Deliberately to accuse you—our own business associate!"

"I can't do it!" And old Mr. Emerson dropped into a chair.

"Nor I!" added Tooker, firmly.

"Good God! What's the matter with you all?" ripped Emerson, angrily. "You agreed

As he turned gayly toward the door of his room his father seized his friend.

"Now, listen—listen to me, my boy!" he whispered in tones of deep feeling. "I—I—advise! In the future of things I haven't very long to live and—it's my duty——

FISHER POET AT BOAT SHOW

"Oh, he's nuthin' in partickler, er brave heart sot in pity,
Oh, er feller that goes hustlin' round with Time,
Just ez nervy that goes soarin' w'are th' gulls play tag all day
An' th' shrouds ring all th' wind hells chime on chime!"

That's the ringer of the Gloucester fisherman, the man who from dawn to dark climbs aloft on the tall spars of the fishing vessels and puts every line in place for voyages to the Banks. And he is made famous in the little verse by Clarence Manning Fall, known along the fishing coast as the pet laureate of the fisherman. He is lecturing at the big motor boat show in lecturing at the big Motor Boat Show now in the last two days at Mechanics building.

During the show, both afternoon and evening, Mr. Fall has told the public of the mysteries of the sea, as seen up from Gloucester fishermen. He has nearly 100 colored slides to illustrate his stories and dramas in the costume of the fisherman he depicts so graphically.

Clarence Fall is a direct descendant of Captain Andrew Robinson, builder of the first schooner in 1713. The man who gave to the commerce of the world a new rig and a new name for the native vernacular. He is particularly fitted to write and lecture on the Gloucester fisherman from the fact that long lines of ancestors on both maternal and paternal sides of the family have been skippers and fishermen.

In Gloucester Dialect.

Many of his stories and poems are written in the peculiar dialect of the Gloucester fishermen, and there is no lack of humor and graphic dramatic force to them, on the shore and parties of the Gloucester life, as depicted so thoroughly his facile pen and words.

Another feature of the show that never ceases to interest all who attend is the Boston AMERICAN exhibit of motor boats and automobiles. Every day and night the away in the 835,000 voting contest. All day and evening there are exhibits in the center of admiring crowds, and well they may be, for among all the many fine boats limited one show up to better advantage than those shown in the AMERICAN space.

As is usual, yesterday's crowd, despite the storm, was a big one, though not as large as on preceding days. It is believed that this year's show will be the largest thus far held.

All of the boat building concerns exhibiting are reporting large sales as the result of the show. They all admit, however, that the day of the cheaper power boat has come, and that all orders are for small pleasure craft to be used in most cases as family boats.

Best Show Yet.

The engine manufacturers never let up their tooting of whistles and clank-clanking of machinery. From one end of the big hall to the other comes the ring, chug and of gas engines and steam, and the odor of nearly every known kind of glue creaks gaze interestingly at all the boats, and the show is generally voted a success.

It is a good show, one of the best in fact that has been given in Boston. The managers are pleased with the result, and sorry for one thing, they could obtain but two boats. In this respect the builders prefer to ship boats of full size, boats they can sell, rather than models like those that make Earlier shows so interesting. There are three models shown, however, one of the famous line recently built by a German line steamship, and a model submarine that took a model of the Panama Exposition in Philadelphia in the year 1876, and had won many model boat races since that time.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; PACIFIC ROADS LEAD STOCKS

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—An increased demand for stocks brought about by early fractional declines caused the market in Wall street to become suddenly strong and active shortly after the opening, with the result that in almost every instance the stocks moved up, many of them recovering their losses.

Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul and Lehigh all advanced.

The Erie stocks were also strong, the common rising 3¼. Amalgamated moved up while Steeling moved across $1 during the first half hour.

Americans were quoting losses in London. The copper stocks were heavy. Trading on the Curb was moderately active.

PETER THE PAINTER SUSPECT ARRESTED

NAPLES, Feb. 3.—Detectives from Scotland Yard caused the arrest here of a man suspected of being "Peter the Painter," the Russian Anarchist for whom the British authorities have been looking since the battle of Sidney street, in which time it was at first thought that he was one of the two outlaws killed. On the person of the prisoner was found a clipping from a London paper containing a picture of "Peter the Painter."

SUFFRAGE BEATEN AT FRANKLIN HOUSE

The girls of the Franklin Square House have voted on the subject of Woman's Suffrage, with substantially the same result obtained by the vote at Wellesley. It was a secret vote, each girl declaring her preference without discussion. There were 276 votes cast; 96 voted in favor and 180 voted against the proposition.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 40

Textile Advertising

The textile industry is the most conservative in the world. Some of the manufacturers have seen a light, however, and are making people demand their trade-marked fabrics by advertising.

One of the pioneers is a silk mill in the lower part of New England. Its goods were of excellent that many department stores sold them as foreign fabrics. A woman would ask for it. But all alike a clerk of the clerk did not have just what she wanted he would bring from the fine shelf this New England mill's product, tack an extra price on it and sell it as imported goods.

Do you wonder that it found its sales a most fluctuating part of its business? It began marking its goods and widely advertising them. Now the department stores sell the goods with the mill's name on them and the market is growing constantly.

The mill is finding new use for its fine quality of silk and suggesting it in neckwear and many other lines that it had previously not touched. It is educating the public to the value of its name on goods and teaching American women that there is just as good silk made here as there is in France.

The manufacturer of textiles who marks his fabrics will find that newspaper advertising will stock them in the department stores and sell them faster to consumers than any other method of salesmanship.

If the local merchants use the local papers, why can't you, Mr. Manufacturer, use the local papers, not only to move your goods into the store, but also off of the shelves?

The best advertising medium in Boston to reach the masses and the classes is the Boston American. It can market your goods quicker than any other form of advertising, because each day it reaches almost 400,000 people. For further particulars address Trade Aid Department, Boston American, Boston, Mass.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

As the market is broadening constantly and daily activity is on the bull side, the outlook is favorable. Some stocks which have advanced sharply may be given a rest every now and then, and others brought to the front in order to stimulate general interest.

$ $ $

The various bull pools in the market are having a busy time of it. They are letting them have all the money they want to buy stocks and are being taken readily as it is smooth sailing. The talk of bear pools in certain issues appears to have but little foundation. There is no concert in the shorting whatever.

$ $ $

While the three great leaders—Steel, Reading and Union Pacific—continue to monopolize the bulk of the trading, many stocks that have been dormant for months show signs of life and are bulging in price. Those with small capitalization are getting the high-priced standard issues like to invest in, and they are finding stocks which gives promise of possessing a future.

$ $ $

The fact that a reaction came at the time Congress was being entertained with an address by Mr. Carnegie on peace was nothing more than a coincidence. Of course, if Andrew Carnegie can begin an investigation, it might create a condition that would frighten many speculators into selling Steel and other securities, but the investigation will get no further than the Congressional floor. Investigations for political effect went out of style the first Tuesday after the first Monday of last November.

$ $ $

The buying of Missouri Pacific is said to be based entirely on a theory of change of management, which should in some way boost the stock many points higher, in the opinion of experts in railroad affairs. A well known institution takes the stand that competent management alone raised Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Atchison from levels at which "Mop" is now selling to their present quotations.

$ $ $

All the Guggenheim shares are in demand. The recent offering has provided funds to make some important moves. For instance, the Guggenheim Exportation Company, which owns $11,200,000 par of Smelting Securities common stock, will dispose of that stock to the American Smelting and Refining Company, either for cash or for the new bonds just issued. If the bonds are taken the Exportation Company will have an income of 6 per cent. in place of stock which has been paying nothing. Brokers think this will be worth thirty or forty points to the Exploration stock.

$ $ $

Copper stocks have been attracting much attention because of the weakness of the gilt-edged issues and the widespread dividend speculation. As announced in this column a few days ago, the Guggenheim stocks were depressed for purposes of accumulation. That belief was evident when there was a general recovery all along the line, led by Anaconda, Butte & Superior, Utah Con., Boston Con., Miami, Inc. Consolidated, Utah and Boston. The speculative position of the coppers is strong.

$ $ $

The United Metals Selling Company is a technical violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and the men behind it are uncomfortable. A new company, to be organized as a new company in London, where the Sherman law does not apply, is said to be in the way they will make it the controlling factor in the copper metal market of the world. What is left of the United Metals Company will be liquidated or turned over to either Amalgamated or Anaconda to become the selling department of the Butte camp.

$ $ $

Specific reasons are given for strength in many departments of the market. For instance, Great Northern Ore certificates have advanced sharply the last few days because the income this year on the stock with the Steel Corporation gives the company $3,937,000 available for dividends, or $2.46 for each outstanding certificate. The corporation must pay for 1,200,000 tons of ore regardless of how much it actually takes, the price per ton for 1911 being 90.3 cents. The certificates have only paid $1 a share in dividends in the past. This could be doubled in 1911 with perfect fairness.

$ $ $

Inside accumulation of Frisco stocks, and particularly the second preferred, seemed to be under way. This movement has for one of its reasons the friendly relations which have been established between the Frisco and the St. Paul. The old, old story about St. Paul helping Frisco build through to the coast is not all imaginary fun. Recent developments suggest that there is really something under way in that direction.

$ $ $

It is quite probable that the net earnings of the Steel Corporation for February will not reflect the improvement in this month, as earnings are made up on the basis of shipments actually made and not on orders received. It will be quite surprising, however, if the next statement of unfilled tonnage, to be made public on the 10th of the month, does not show an increase in unfilled orders.

$3,000,000 FOR NEW PRINCETON COLLEGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Dean Andrew F. West announced at a meeting of the Princeton Club that between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 was available for the new graduate college at Princeton and that work would start within thirty days. The funds include the William Cooper Procter donation of $500,000, the Weyman bequest, now known to be between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000; the Swan gift of $250,000; the Grover Cleveland Memorial Tower contribution, and finally $1,200,000 which has been given by friends of the university through the efforts of Moses Taylor Pyne of the class of '77.

UNEMPLOYED SOCIETY SPURNS TAFT LETTER

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 3.—A row was almost precipitated at to-day's session of the Unemployed Workers' Association, made up of unemployed, when President James Eads How offered to read a letter from President Taft. The delegates at once shouted "Tear it up. Throw it away. If Taft wants to talk to us let him come here." How quieted the tumult by laying the letter and envelope aside.

PRODUCE MEN URGE TREATY

At a special meeting of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange today the following resolutions were presented and adopted unanimously favoring the proposed treaty between United States and Canada. The resolutions were presented by former President Arthur T. Cummings. Here are the resolutions:

Whereas, President Taft has transmitted to Congress a special message, embodying the terms of a proposed agreement between United States and the Dominion of Canada in respect to reciprocess trade relations, and,

Whereas, the free trade in certain articles of food and reduction of duties on manufactured goods thus proposed would be of great benefit to a majority of the inhabitants of the United States,

Therefore, be it resolved by the members of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange in meeting assembled this third day of February, 1911, that we heartily endorse the terms of the proposed reciprocal agreement with Canada in respect to the elimination and reduction of import duties.

That we respectfully urge upon the Congress the enactment of the proposed agreement.

That we respectfully urge our representatives in Congress to use their active efforts to bring about its passage, and

That a petition be drafted for the members of the Exchange to sign in favor of the approval of the aforesaid treaty; and

That copies of this petition be sent to the Congressmen and Senators of Massachusetts.

ROURKE SEEKS DRIVERS' AID

Commissioner of Public Works Louis K. Rourke declared to-day that devices to prevent horses from slipping on the smooth pavements in story weather should be in general use in Boston. He says that in traveling about the city he has seen but one horse provided with special footgear having cleats or spurs on the bottom.

"The city will do the best it can to keep the horses on these feet," said the commissioner, "but we should have the cooperation of the teamsters and owners."

Mr. Rourke admits the serious conditions along Washington and Tremont streets, yesterday afternoon, when at certain periods every or thirty horses could be seen prostrate at once. He made an examination of the smooth pavement and found that sand did no good whatever, "Soon after it is put down it is mixed with the sugary snow and was covered up, thus furnishing no footing for the horses," he said. "I saw the futility of using more than a few minutes and ordered the foreman to use ashes under such conditions. The property owners object to ashes, it is true, but they must accept conditions as we find them. I know of no other material that will do the work in such weather as this. We will endeavor to remove the ashes as quickly as possible after they have done their work and thus reduce the objections to a minimum."

"If the horses were all equipped with calked shoes, I would do away with 90 per cent. of the falls that horses suffer during this kind of weather."

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Are the American People as Bad as Their Public Officials?

And Might the Corrupt Man in Office Truthfully Say to the Average Voter "You Are About As Corrupt As I Am?"

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

The voters of the United States have spent years pitying themselves because they vote so sweetly and so regularly and as a result of their voting get so many dishonest men in office.

Recent revelations AMONG THE VOTERS THEMSELVES recall strongly the old statement that every country has about as good a government as it deserves.

The voter says quite often that our Washingtons, Jeffersons and other great men little dreamed that they were risking their lives to establish a government that would be ruled by money, by trusts and by corrupt officials.

It might well be added, in order to divide the responsibility, that those Washingtons and Jeffersons did not imagine, either, that they were establishing a government which in one single county in Ohio would show twelve hundred free and independent citizens confessing in open court that they had sold their votes, or that would show in a great State like Illinois corruption rampant, dishonesty by the voters themselves openly confessed, and the State's seat in the national Senate bought for cash and with impunity.

There is something wrong with a large percentage of the people of this country when a great voting district in Ohio is obliged to confess that every single voter has taken a bribe for his vote, and when an election produces a state of things in which only the women can vote—because all the male voters have proved themselves ballot-box criminals and ineligible as voters. When such conditions develop it is time for the people to begin worrying a little about THEMSELVES, no longer confining their worry to officials in office.

The spirit of grafting, the insane love of money, the contempt for honesty so far as government and public office are concerned have sunk deep down into the people UNFORTUNATELY.

A cynical politician talking of "graft" said in tones of absolute conviction:

"When you hear the ordinary man talking about graft, he is really JEALOUS. That is what is the matter with him. He would like to have the money himself if he could get it, and if he could get his share to-day you would not hear him talking any more of graft."

There is unfortunately as much of truth as of brutal cynicism in that statement. The latest news tells of three hundred men named as vote-sellers in Danville, Illinois.

Photographs in all of the illustrated publications show a courthouse in Ohio besieged by voters rushing to confess themselves bribe-takers and to escape by confession with a penalty as small as possible.

The man who got the largest price for his vote is looked upon as a sort of a hero and his picture is published larger than that of the others

The country needs purifying in public office and equally in the minds of voters.

Ignorance and lack of imagination are at the bottom of this curse of dishonesty.

The voter who takes a bribe, and the officeholder who takes a larger bribe, are alike ignorant, dull and without conception of public or private duty or of patriotism.

It is the dishonesty at the top unquestionably that has filtered down into the body of the people.

Great names in finance are held up to the young men of the country as examples of success; these great names are held up subsequently, without especial opprobrium, as examples of men robbing their own country.

Men worth tens of millions build armor plate for the battleships of the country that has made them rich, and they swindle the Government and sell defective armor, risking the lives of the sailors and defeat in battle FOR PROFIT.

Men worth millions supply the American army in the field with preserved foodstuffs and they poison the soldiers with rotten, old and infected food—FOR PROFIT.

The Sugar Trust confesses to thefts of millions. It is permitted to pay back a small part of what it has stolen from the Government custom house—and no big man goes to jail.

The Tobacco Trust steals its millions and tens of millions from the Government, and the men that actually get the money will not go to prison—on the contrary, they will continue to write articles for the magazines telling young men "how to succeed."

Individuals returning from Europe deliberately perjure themselves to evade custom house duties. And those that have made their fortunes—thanks to the protective tariff—are first and most conspicuous in lying and cheating to evade the tariff when they return to this country from Europe.

It is not a very pretty sight, not one to be proud of, when a man with a hundred millions robs his own country for the sake of a few millions more, and when the man, who knows that his vote and his honor alone distinguish him from the peasant in Russia, sells his vote and his honor for two dollars, and grins at his neighbor who has done the same.

Unpleasant things, cancers in the body and cancers in the soul, should be cut open and attended to, painful as it is. As big a cancer as we have in the United States to-day is the dishonesty, the shameless scrambling for money at any price that exists AMONG THE PEOPLE THEMSELVES as well as among the public officials habitually attacked.

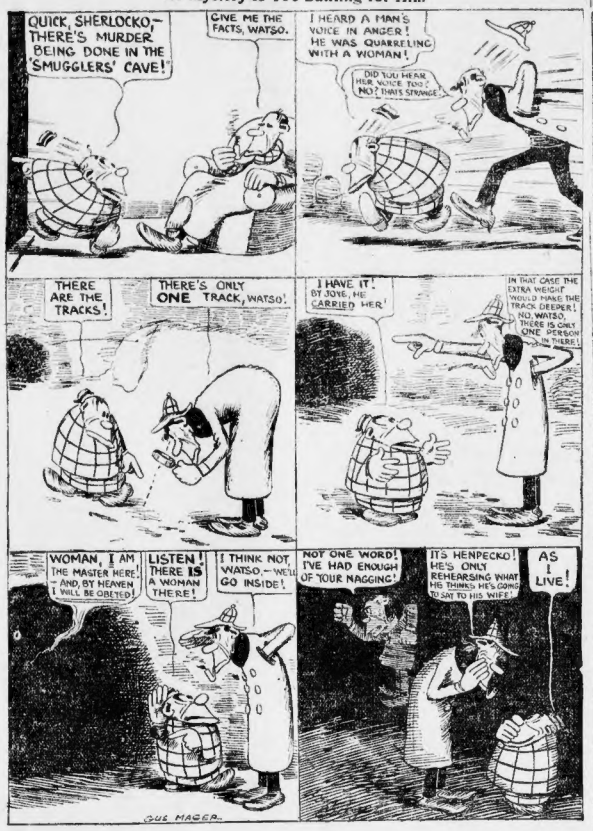
No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him



QUICK, SHERLOCKO,—THERE'S MURDER BEING DONE IN THE 'SMUGGLERS' CAVE!
GIVE ME THE FACTS, WATSO.
I HEARD A MAN'S VOICE IN ANGER! HE WAS QUARRELING WITH A WOMAN!
DID YOU HEAR HER VOICE TOO? NO? THAT'S STRANGE
THERE ARE THE TRACKS!
THERE'S ONLY ONE TRACK, WATSO!
I HAVE IT! BY JOVE, HE CARRIED HER!
IN THAT CASE THE EXTRA WEIGHT WOULD MAKE THE TRACK DEEPER! NO, WATSO, THERE IS ONLY ONE PERSON IN THERE!
WOMAN, I AM THE MASTER HERE! AND, BY HEAVEN I WILL BE OBEYED!
LISTEN! THERE IS A WOMAN THERE!
I THINK NOT, WATSO,—WE'LL GO INSIDE!
NOT ONE WORD! I'VE HAD ENOUGH OF YOUR NAGGING!
IT'S HENPECKO! HE'S ONLY REHEARSING WHAT HE THINKS HE'S GOING TO SAY TO HIS WIFE!

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

TRAINING THAT DEVELOPS THE REAL MAN

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

PEOPLE born and brought up in straitened circumstances have a sad deal to endure, if there is one thing for which they can feel to be thankful, and that is that if they do not sense about their hardships and are not cast down by them they stand a better chance than those who are comfortably fixed of making a great success in the world.

No man who has been able to accomplish something in life but is glad that he had to rough it when he was young. Riches serenity may, perhaps, prove the death of people that are puny, but with a fair constitution a boy can rise from a straw bed or even a husk mattress, and, with the thermometer at twenty below zero, take a plunge into ice water and come out the cleaner, the better, and the more pluckst for it, and with an increase of basis for a healthy and long life.

It is not necessary, perhaps, to keep up that treatment till one is fifty or eighty; but, for a boy, stiff, cold water, in an unwarmed room lighted by a tallow dip, or even a pine knot, with a diet of hasty pudding, cornbread and beans, are healthful.

Heroic Treatment for the Boy Often Develops the Man

It gives him something to nerve himself up to. Knives are sharpened on stone. Sparks are struck out of flint. So are boys.

Life, for quantities of people, is getting too soft, too many feathers, too much candle, coddle and crutch. Leaning prevents cartilage from hardening into bone. A rich father can make his son rich in dollars, and that is the only thing he can make him rich in.

One's ability to do things each one has to learn for himself, and if he is so conveniently fixed that there is no necessity for his bestirring himself he will probably cradle himself in the paternal nest and slothfully fatten on inherited comforts.

Such a man will count one in the census and will count one on the assessor's list, but will otherwise be written with a zero. Boys that have to rough it and fight their way, and who have to carry themselves in their own arms, had better thank the Lord for giving them a difficult start-off instead of carrying the lot of those who are handicapped by being able to be trundled through life on a litter.

CRAMMING the mind is a different thing from educating it. That principle is distinctly announced by Harvard University in the changed policy which it has adopted, in its manner of dealing with applicants for admission, and is just as applicable to little students in the primary schools as to those who attend college.

Harvard proposes now to examine the BOY——not simply the MARKS he has received while in the sitting school. His admission hereafter is not to be determined by the number of items and bits of information that he has loaded his brain with just before coming up for examination, but by his general mental tone and ability; by the scholarly fidelity which he has shown; by the solidity of the work he has done, and by his general fitness or unfitness for being entered upon a course of further training.

The new president of Harvard had even previously shown his disposition to break loose from some of the formalities and superficialities that were encumbering the prosperity of that institution.

But the fact of most interest just now is that what is condemnable at Harvard is condemnable everywhere, and that to estimate a pupil here in our primary, grammar or high school by the readiness with which he can unload his mind of the stuff that he has just been stuffing into it is to measure his mental condition by inadequate methods.

Hearing recitations is a very different thing from teaching. That is one of the facts of which many teachers, so called, have never even dreamed.

The only first-class teaching is that which makes what the pupil has just recited the basis upon which the teacher proceeds to instruct the pupil. This gives opportunity for free play between teacher and taught.

It calls into exercise the personality of both parties. It rules out machine work. It obliterates the intrusion of the superdidactic. It gets down on the reality of the teacher. It be or she be endowed with that commodity. It takes the school to a higher grade of power, influence and dignity.

Harvard has sounded a high note, and it is for boards of education, superintendents of schools, principals and grade teachers, to take their muzzle up to that key.

Harvard is a pace-setter and its new president is found to be an influence in elevating the teaching profession in all its grades.

To Pessimists

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHEN the sun isn't bright and the sky isn't blue,
And no one is friendly or jolly or true,
And the easiest louders refuse to come through,
And life seems a bust and a flivver;
When you haven't an appetite—even for pie—
And you dismally moan that you wish you would die,
Don't fancy that nature has gone all awry,
It's something gone wrong with your liver.

WHEN the girl that you love prefers somebody else,
When Fate picks you out for his wallops and welts,
When your luck seems as bad as one T. Roos-e-velt's,
And you think you will jump in the river;
Don't do it—although you may think you're accursed,
And you find that the best you can see is the worst,
Go hunt up a good, able doctor man first,
It isn't your luck; it's your liver.

WHEN the books that you read seem uncommonly bad
And the musical plays are pathetic and sad,
And the jokes of your friends drive you perfectly mad,
And Caruso seems merely to chatter;
Don't turn on the gas in your flat—not to-night—
Just chirk up a bit for a while and sit tight,
Day after to-morrow you'll find you're all right—
Your liver—that's all that's the matter.

Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in the dust.
—SHIRLEY.

Drama and Education

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT is not often that you find the drama and education sitting serenely under the same roof—particularly if the drama is represented by that straightaway modern commercialism that supplies plays solely for the profit it yields and not for the good that it may do.

And yet, with no aim to uplift the stage and playing the game squarely as an amusement enterprise that will entice dollars and cents to its box office, John Craig is this week walking hand in hand with the schools of Boston, contributing his mite toward making an understanding of Shakespeare clearer and more definite to hundreds of boys and girls whose study of "Hamlet" in this time has been purely academic.

Mr. Craig makes no pretence as an educator, but a glance at any of the audiences at the Castle Square Theatre would convince the most unfriendly critic of the stage that, after all, a modest stock company may be an exceedingly useful instrument in the training of young students who take their study of Shakespeare seriously. It is a pleasing sight, these youngsters offer at the Castle Square, as they earnestly compare the text of their school "Hamlet" to the interpretation given the play by Mr. Craig's company. Unlike the blase theatregoer, the young student does not attend a performance of "Hamlet" to pick flaws with the acting, or even to find enjoyment, but to get something that will help and encourage him in his studies. One can see this in every youthful face. And these youngsters make good audiences—I have Mr. Craig's word for it.

This evidence that school boys and girls find something to interest and help them in Shakespeare performances at moderate prices is found in the replies received to Mr. Craig's announcement that in his next plunge into Shakespeare the selection of the play will be left to his patrons. It is the student who will doubtless influence the selection, for Mr. Craig's mail shows that the youngster in school is a better and more prolific letter writer than the average adult—and the schoolbo- knows what he wants.

Those who believe that the stage makes no appeal to the boy and girl in school should see one of Mr. Craig's audiences this week—it would tell an entirely different story.
